CAMPAIGN OVER, CANADA IS NOW VOTING

Verdict Of Federal Polling Will Be Known Here Early This Evening

Results Should Start Flooding in at 7 p.m.
 Which Time Last Ballots Will Be Cast

Seven weeks of election campaigning in Canada will quietly come to a close Sunday night as the Dominion is expected to vote towards its twenty-first general election since Confederation. Polls opened across the country at 8 a.m. Standard Time and will close at 6 p.m. local Standard Time. (That means 7 p.m. Pacific Daylight Time in Prince Rupert.)

Hours of vote-taking by Canadians, the total up to a national record of 1,000, will flood the polling to elect the 262 men and women who will form the new House of Commons. Nearly 100,000 voters are registered.

As with the polls in the past, the weather conditions are expected to be favorable. At one Ontario centre, a "terrific" vote, in the Maritime and Quebec the early vote was light. No incidents were reported in the East.

Train began in Vancouver after 10 a.m. Results will become known after the polls close here at 7 p.m. It being contrary to the action Act to publish or disclose any results until after the polls have closed. There is a flood of eastern representatives after 7 p.m.

STILL ON STRIKE
LONDON—More than 1,000 stevedores today walked out of a London dock in protest against what striking crews on Canadian ships described as "betrayal" by shipowners of the agreement announced Friday. Work stopped at one dock on ships including the strikebound Argonaut, a Canadian vessel. Canadian crew leaders said they had been informed the terms would be kept only until they arrived in Canada and then they would be obliged to join the S.I.U.

STILL SEEK KILLER
MISSION—Belief that the killer of Silver Hill will come out of hiding and attempt to slay at least three more persons is expressed by the man who considers himself No. 1 on the "death list." Phil Catherwood, superintendent of roads for Mission district, said the hunted farmer, Ivar Johnson, aged 70, will return to this scene of the killings of two women and try to take the lives of Constable Peter Berger, a neighbor, Ivar Ericson, and himself (Catherwood).

FRENCH ARREST RUSS SOLDIERS
BERLIN—Two Russian soldiers and a Russian civilian were taken to the headquarters of the French police after a scuffle over the custody of a Polish national, a police official said today.

He told reporters that a west Berlin patrol in the French sector first went to the aid of the Pole after he complained early today that a Russian civilian was trying to kidnap him. Police took the Pole into custody and later Russian soldiers arrived and a flight developed over the prisoner.

PAPER HITS AT CZECH PRELATE
PRAGUE—The socialist Czech newspaper Svoboda in Slovo, today accused Archbishop Joseph Beran of trying to become a cardinal by serving the Vatican at the expense of the State. The paper claims that the Archbishop's activities were "directed against the State and dictated by the country's enemies."

CRITICAL OF PRESS

Criticism of the press by the chairman, W. H. Brett, and a warning of approaching recession by the speaker of the evening, Harry Archibald, featured the C.C.F. meeting in the Sons of Norway Hall which was comfortably filled by an audience in which a good many women were included Saturday evening.

Following the address a brief discussion in which some of the audience took part, dealt with the Atlantic Pact.

Mr. Brett said statements had been made to the general effect that it was always desirable for a winning candidate to be on the government side. Such a principle was both wrong and harmful, if actively practised. Speaking of Mr. Archibald, he could certainly say he had been most vigilant and industrious during his four years in Ottawa. Local establishments such as the grain elevator, post office and other requirements were already here when he became member and, since then, he had performed much good work.

Mr. Brett, in his concluding remarks, devoted some attention to the press. He charged there had been unfairness. It could be clearly seen in this campaign there had been a large proportion of space given Coalition and Liberal matters, than to the C.C.F.

He pointed to copies of advertisements, and asked where was the money coming from.

MR. ARCHIBALD
 Mr. Archibald, early in his remarks, declared there was not the slightest doubt about the approach of a depression in the United States and, that being the case, the same would follow in Canada. Indeed, it was true that in Canada, commercial bankruptcies were showing an increase. One, everywhere, could note unmistakable signs of a return of lowering prices. About as good advice as he could offer now, was to get ready for the coming change.

Speaking of Ottawa, and the four years he had spent there, it was always so obvious that unless one kept himself absolutely in line with government policy and trend of thought, he would be promptly and surely branded as a Communist, no matter how much and how strongly he could be opposed to it.

"I had it thrown at me all right," he said.

In Parliament he had been true to his convictions which certainly had nothing to do with Communism. There had been charges made against him, and he had not hesitated to call the person making it, a liar. As long as he was a member of parliament, he declared to the meeting, he would never bow his head and bend his knee to any editors and politicians.

Opening of Limberlost-Inaugural of Splendid Resort on Q.C. Islands

Setting of Natural Beauty Enhanced by Modern Lodge Development Within Short Distance of Prince Rupert

A sun-bathed meadow, flanked by groves of fresh new growth spruce through which the breezes of the Pacific Ocean waft and opening on to the famous North Beach of Graham Island on whose hard white sands the surf breaks in long white rollers reminiscent of the California beaches.

Nearly a meandering river in whose deep pools the hungry cutthroat and Dolly Varden lurk eager for the fly or worm.

Where the curious deer stroll out of an evening from the glades of the forest.

In such a natural setting of picturesque and unspoiled beauty at Sangan River, seven miles from Masset village, has been established by an enterprising Prince Rupert syndicate Limberlost Lodge, a smart and well-appointed holiday resort designed along the popular central assembly and individual cabin lines such as have made such places as Jasper world famous and greatly in demand by people the continent over.

Thereby is now brought to the people of Prince Rupert, within sixty miles of the city and accessible by a few hours delightful sail in a comfortable Union Steamships coastal liner or in a half-hour flight over the sparkling waters of Hecate Straits by speedy Queen Charlotte Air Lines seaplane, a type of vacation venue—one which is easy on the pocket book and yet provides by up-to-date and carefully arranged appointment everything that the greatly-heralded and farther-removed retreats have to offer.

The official opening of Limberlost Lodge took place Saturday night with Mayor Nora Arnold of Prince Rupert officiating in a colorful international ceremony before an assembly which included a large representation of the population of Masset, forty special excursionists from Prince Rupert and already resident guests from as far away as California.

The opening ceremonies culminated a day of full enjoyment in which, under blazing sunlight, all manner of outdoor recreation for which arrangements and equipment have already been admirably provided, were enjoyed to heart's content. It was a simple or preview over which all present came home loudly enthusiastic, resolved to go again on the first possible occasion and anxious to tell their friends of the new facility which has been provided for their recreation relaxation.

FORMAL OPENING
 The formal opening of Limberlost Lodge might be called an historic event for the Queen Charlotte Islands and was also not without significance in the new relationship which has been growing up, particularly in view of recent developments in the way of transportation and communications, between the Islands and this port of Prince Rupert. The dignitaries who took part in the inaugural ceremonies at Limberlost did not fail to emphasize these aspects.

Rowland Miles, recreational director of the Prince Rupert Civic Centre, acted as master of ceremonies for the formal opening proceedings and called upon J. A. Findlay, Indian superintendent for the Queen Charlotte Islands, to officially welcome the guests to the Queen Charlotte Islands. Masset was coming into its own, said Mr. Findlay, mentioning the recent events of long distance telephone service, the daily airplane service from Prince Rupert, the re-opening of the Navy signals station and, now, the opening of Limberlost Lodge. He expressed confidence that the project would be backed by the patronage of the people of Masset and Prince Rupert in particular and that its fame would soon spread far afield. He extended best wishes to the backers and management of Limberlost.

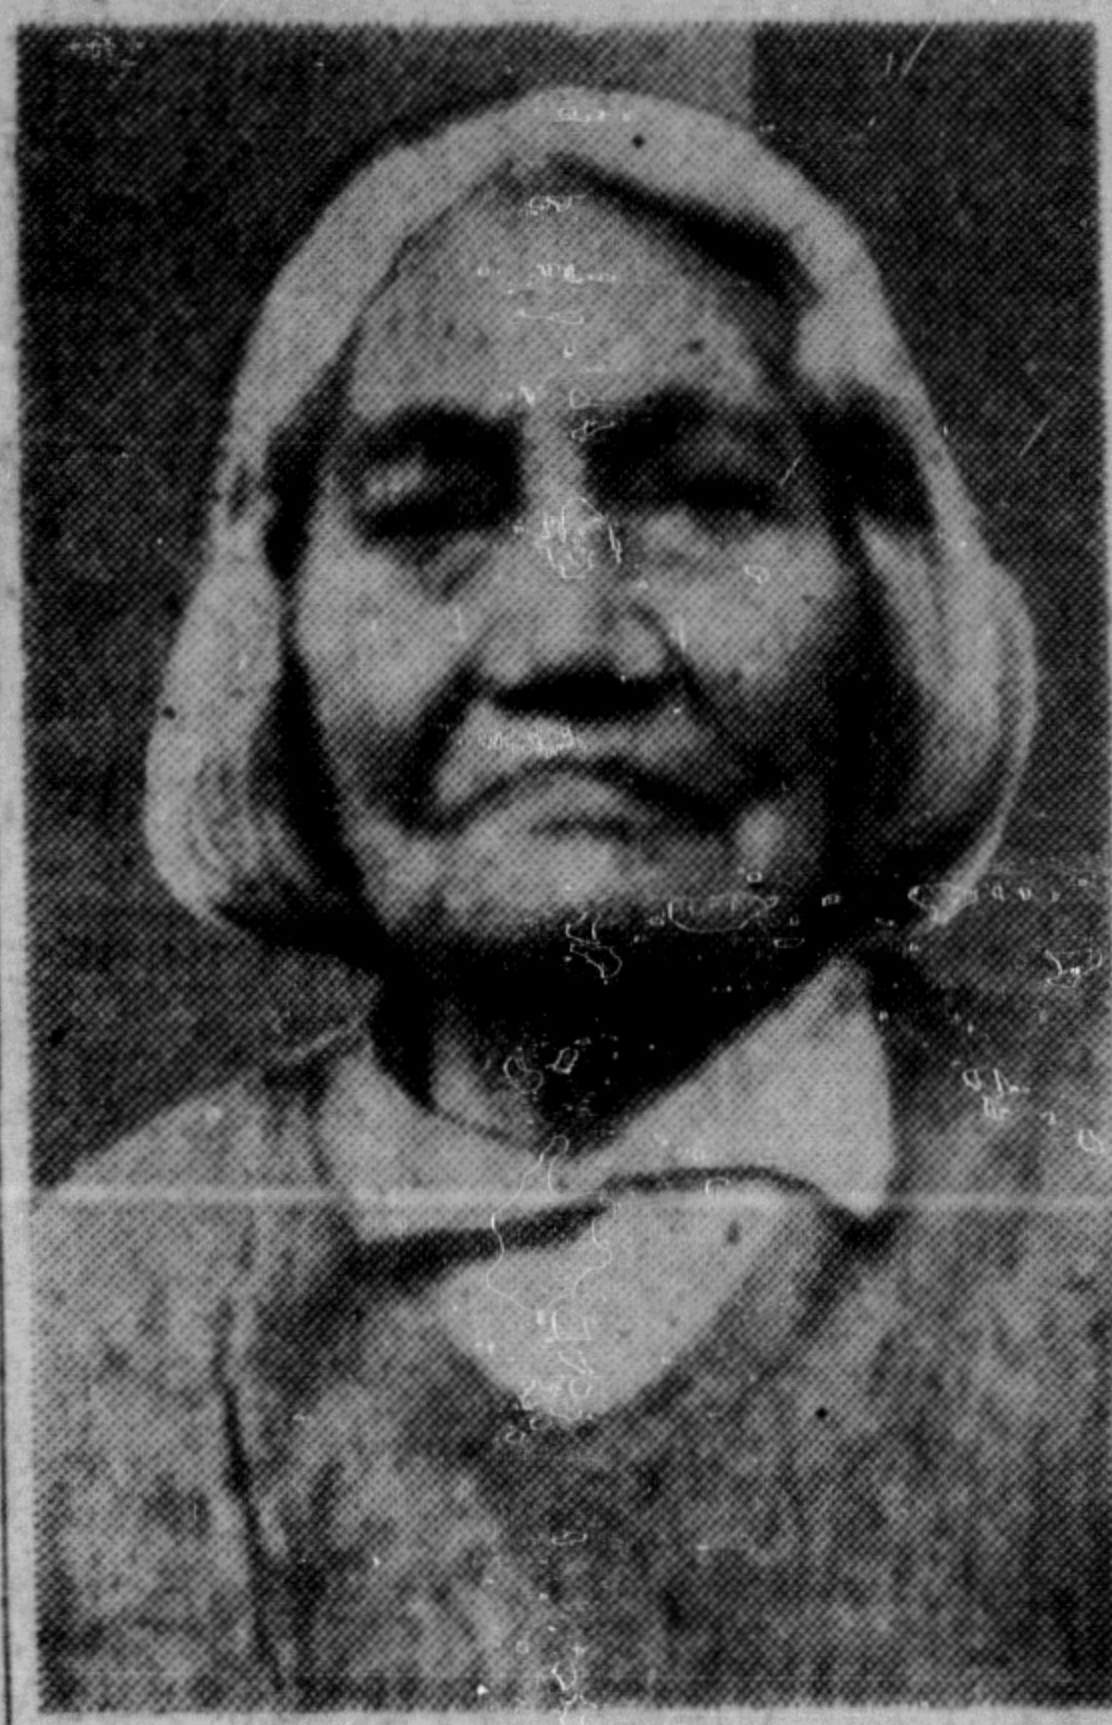

Ross Kingston, the youthful resident manager of Limberlost, hoped that the incident now being observed would be but the nucleus of ever-widening friendships and associations.

A unique incident of the inaugural formalities was the presentation by Frank Skinner, who extended the best wishes of the Union Steamships Ltd., of a unique memento in the form of the ship's bell of the old steamer Coquitlam, renovated and shined up, to be used as the dinner gong for Limberlost Lodge. (As far back as 1892 and up to twenty or thirty years later the little old Coquitlam plied the waters to the north coast and the Queen Charlotte Islands. The modern liner Coquitlam is the vessel which provides steamship service from Prince Rupert to Masset).

Neil Kingston, president of Limberlost Lodge Ltd., after acknowledging the gift which was greatly appreciated, expressed pleasure at the presence of so many guests and paid tribute to the fine people of Masset and the Queen Charlotte Islands among whom he was now himself numbered. A lot of money had been spent, a lot of work had been done and much energy and thought had been expended in organizing an enterprise which, it was hoped, would bring within the financial range of every individual pleasurable enjoyment amid attractive outdoor surroundings. "Northern B.C. we feel has now got something to enjoy, a place to play, rest or relax, and we are trusting to you people to help us succeed," he commented.

MAYOR'S BLESSING
 Mayor Arnold expressed her feeling of pleasure and honor at being asked to officiate at this opening and to be present on this balcony with four guests. (Continued on Page 5)

COMMERCIALS WIN
 Commercial defeated Savoy by a score of 11 to 6 in the City Baseball League yesterday. It was the first win of the season for Commercial.

NAAS RIVER MATRIARCH—Mrs. Emily Bolton of Kincolith, who passed away recently. She claimed to be over 100 years old although official records do not verify the claim.

LOOKS AT LIMBERLOST

Limberlost Lodge Ltd. is a Prince Rupert incorporation. Neil Kingston is president of the company. Ross Kingston is vice-president and resident manager. R. C. Barbour is secretary and George Martin and J. T. Harvey, directors.

Operating staff consists of twelve, the Kingstons, older and younger, being assisted by their wives while Mrs. Bond is dietitian. Local guides assist the hunters and fishermen and look after the boats.

Neil Kingston announced during the opening proceedings on Saturday that he was resigning as president of the Northwest Construction to devote his full attention to the operation of Limberlost Lodge.

Hon. L. G. Eyres, provincial minister of trade and industry, sent a message of congratulations and best wishes at the opening of Limberlost. The minister had hoped to be at the official opening. The deputy minister, E. G. Rowbottom, is expected to visit the lodge in July.

A public address system carries music and messages for a distance of 2 1/2 miles from the central recreational hall at Limberlost.

No one had a finer day at Limberlost than Joe Scott. And there is no bigger booster. Reason, of course: the fishing was good. Joe was fly fishing and he hauled out seven fine cutthroat as he took time out from the other diversions of the day to cast his seductive flies into the deep pools of the Sangan. Fish were about uniform size up to 15 inches.

Pilot Bill McLeod of the Queen Charlotte Air Lines gave the evening crowds a thrill as he zoomed over the Limberlost meadow. Dr. Bill Kergin, president of Prince Rupert Aero Club, was flying with him. Some of the Prince Rupert guests stayed overnight and came home on the aircraft Sunday.

Capt. William McCombe, Chief Engineer Fred Smith and others of the personnel of the Coquitlam were evening visitors at the Limberlost as the ship lay at the Masset dock following her return after the run up Massett Inlet and before the departure for Prince Rupert at midnight.

Skeena Opening Quiet; Electors' Flow Steady

Voters at 135 polling stations in Skeena riding today are deciding which of two candidates will represent them at Ottawa for the next five years—C.C.F. former member H. G. Archibald or Liberal candidate Edward (Ted) Applewhite.

They started streaming to the polls at 9 o'clock Pacific Daylight Time this morning and the final ballots will be cast at 7 o'clock this evening. In that 10-hour interval, the majority of Skeena's 15,000 voters are expected to make their choice.

About one-third of the eligible voters in the riding are registered in Prince Rupert, where 22 polling stations are active in the Civic Centre auditorium. The other 112 are scattered over the largest electoral district in the province and one of the largest in the Dominion.

Voting here this morning was relatively light, Returning Officer Rod MacLeod reported. Between 9 o'clock and 11:30, 540 votes had been cast out of an eligible total of 4,991.

The pace was expected to increase sharply this afternoon when scores of plants and business places released their workers to vote.

When the polls opened, almost every one of the 23 tables at which sat a deputy returning officer, a poll clerk and two scrutineers, was immediately visited by a voter, some of whom had waited half an hour for the opening.

Both Mr. Applewhite and Mr. Archibald were present when the polls opened. During the morning they chatted frequently and had a friendly cup of coffee together.

THE WEATHER

Synopsis

A storm centred over the Queen Charlotte Islands this morning is moving southeastward along the coast of British Columbia. Rain is falling in the coastal regions and there will be scattered showers over the interior of the province.

Prospects for Tuesday are for a continuation of cool cloudy weather with scattered showers.

Forecast
 Queen Charlottes and North Coast—Cloudy with showers this afternoon, tonight and Tuesday. Winds light. Little change in temperature. Lows tonight and highs tomorrow—at Port Hardy 48 and 55, Massett 45 and 53, Prince Rupert 45 and 55.

Two Bear At Limberlost

California Hunter Happy Over Bag—Coming Back In Fall

Edwy Safford, Sacramento Valley rancher, who also has a home at Berkeley in San Francisco Bay, came to Limberlost Lodge, near Masset, with the express intention of bagging a big black bear. He was doubly rewarded. Here yesterday with Mrs. Safford and grandson, John Murphy, after two weeks at Limberlost, Mr. Safford was taking home two fine hides which will find a treasured place in his home as rugs and mementoes of a memorable trip.

Mr. Safford had been trying hard for some days to sight a bear, putting out crab meat and such bait and had just about given it up when, one morning last week in a meadow about a mile and a half from camp, he sighted the object of his quest. It was about 150 yards distant but Mr. Safford proved a deadly shot. With one bullet from his 30.06 Winchester he laid Bruin low. The bullet had broken his back.

Three days later Mr. Safford sighted and shot his second bear about 400 yards distant from the first.

Both animals weighed over 400 pounds.

Mr. Safford has hunted with success in the Cariboo and Stuart Lake districts of Central British Columbia but this was his first trip to the Queen Charlotte Islands. He was pleased with the stay at Limberlost that he intends to come back in the fall for bird hunting.

LIBERALS WIND UP CAMPAIGN

"Get the vote to the polls"

Addressing an audience of 50 party supporters, Mr. Applewhite urged them to make an extra effort to bring out all the voters so that the election would be an expression of political feeling on the part of all the people.

He congratulated his opponents and his own supporters on the clean campaign which had been waged in past weeks. The campaign had been fought on both sides, he said, on the issues involved and no outside considerations had been injected.

The issues, he declared, were largely those of free enterprise versus socialism "of prosperity versus depression."

"Depression is the only thing that they know. They have worked, thought and prayed for depression since the end of the war. We have fought equally hard for prosperity," he said.

His trips through this riding revealed that "this district is progressing—the people are working and they are working hard and cheerfully."

Chairman of the meeting was P. H. Lindsay.
