Slam, Impossible With Either Seven-Card Suit as Trump, Is Made With Three-Carder

This hand is from a match between Mr. Champion's team and a team of four representing the Uptown Club. When the hand was first played, Mr. Champion held the East cards and defeated his opponents' six-diamond contract.

On the replay in the other, Mr. Dale sat South. "Your opponents must have got into the wrong suit, Champion," he said, "because I made the slam."
"Impossible," Mr. Champion replied. "On any kind of sensible bidding, you reach six diamonds or six spades and neither contract can be made."

Mr. Dale smiled. "Who said the bidding was sensible?" he said. "And who said we played at either spades or diamonds? Here's what happened. I bid a diamond and Muzzy bid two spades. I rebid three diamonds and here Muzzy jumped to four no trump."

"Of course that was a foolish bid because he still didn't know where we were going to play the hand. Anyway I showed my two aces with a bid of five hearts. "Muzzy apparently forgot he had used Blackwood," Mr. Dale continued, "because he now bid six hearts. I thought he had a powerful two-suiter in the majors and I passed. It was a bit of a shock when the dummy came down and I found myself playing six hearts with only three trumps in each hand.

"Mr. West opened the 10 of clubs and dummy's jack held. As silly as the contract was, I saw a remote chance to make it. I led a small spade and ruffed it with the deuce of hearts. I led to the ace of diamonds, returned a second spade and ruffed it with the ace of hearts."

"Then I led my last heart and finessed dummy's 10. I cashed the king and queen of hearts, discarding diamonds from hand. When both opponents followed, there was only one hurdle left."
"I see it now," said Mr. Champion. "Next you played the ace of spades and the king dropped."

"Right," exulted Mr. Dale. "Now all I had to do was to keep on leading spades until West trumped. The king of clubs was an entry for the rest of the spades."
"Fantastic, unbelievable," muttered Mr. Champion.
"Guess I'm going to have to play with younger people," kidded old Mr. Dale. "It's old-fashioned to prefer a seven-card suit to a good, playable three-carder."
