HOTEL FIRE

had known Morgan for 10 years. He told court he was one of the first to arouse from the smoke in the building. When he opened his door, the hallway was filling with smoke.

"I hollered there was a fire and people rushed out. I ran out, too."

He said his room on the first floor was directly over room 2 in the basement.

"When I looked into the window of room 2 I saw flames. They were orange," He said he didn't see flames anywhere else at the time.

James McLean said both he and his roommate Morgan were awake when they became aware of the fire. McLean said he rushed out of his basement room and headed for the stairs. He saw flames, he said, around the room next to his, which was room 2. He thought Morgan was coming, too.

"I was excited. There were lots of people around," McLean said both he and Morgan had "a few beers" and had come back to their room about an hour before the fire.

James Stroble who lived in a top floor room and Gus Petersen who lived in room 1 in the basement also gave evidence. Stroble said he heard shouting in the early morning. When he saw smoke he set off the fire alarm on his floor, "grabbed a pair of pants and headed down the fire escape."

Petersen said he was sleeping when he was aroused by smoke. He said he ran out through the rear door of the basement. The fire truck already was there, he said.

Mr. Prystay, when asked by a jurymen, said "hotplates were not allowed" in the rooms of the tenants. He said he knew nothing about the Peters having a hotplate in their room.

About the fire, Prystay said he had gone to check the furnace in the basement at "exactly 2 a.m." and "everything was OK." He said he was sure of the time because he took his watch out of his pocket and laid it on the table.

Constable Blake of the RCMP testified he heard the fire truck siren at 2:15 a.m. while patrolling in the police vehicle and followed the truck. He told of assisting the fire chief and three firemen with a ladder to help people escape.

A few minutes after the first fire truck arrived, the second one came with more firemen. More policemen also came and all helped to confine the blaze.

Both, Chief Becker and Constable Blake said that although they attempted to enter the burning building, flames barred their way.

BLACKWOOD on Bridge

By EASLEY BLACKWOOD

Mr. Dale Avoids the Risk Of Being Too Vulnerable

If Mr. Abel had held an evenly balanced hand, he might have passed his bare three honor tricks. But with five cards in the top suit and a singleton, his opening bid was perfectly proper.

Mr. Dale had fair values but he elected not to risk coming into the odding vulnerable. Mrs. Keen could have bid her hand a little better although, in this case, the same final contract would have been reached. There's some danger in jumping to three of your partner's major suit without any honor in that suit. Mrs. Keen felt she made up for this deficiency by her good high card holdings in the other suits. However, she might have temporized with a bid of two hearts on the first round and then jumped to four spades after Mr. Abel's minimum rebid of two spades.

The king of clubs was led and Mr. Abel won with the ace. He cashed the ace of spades and was shocked to see Mr. Dale discard the deuce of clubs. Now he had two sure trump losers plus a loser in both diamonds and clubs. As he saw it, the only chance was to find one opponent with the queen-jack of diamonds doubleton. This was not the case, however, and the contract was down one.

Mr. Abel had a better chance than the one he gave himself. That was to take tricks with his small spades rather than to have them fall helplessly under Mr. Champion's queen and jack.

At trick three he should have led a club. Mr. Dale would win with the queen and would have no better return than a diamond. This could be won with dummy's ace. Now he could cash the ace of hearts and ruff a heart, ruff his last club on the board and ruff another heart in his hand. He could then lead a diamond to the king and ruff dummy's last heart.

At this point he would have nine tricks home and the king of trumps would furnish the tenth one. At the end, Mr. Champion would have the irritating job of ruffing his partner's good diamond trick and thus, two of the defenders' "sure" tricks would fall at once.

grab a taxi and get to the studio."

Someone remembered that the author had said he was going home to work on a script, so immediately the studio contacted every hotel in Hollywood and Beverly Hills and Glendale and Los Angeles, and every motel and apartment house and every men's club.

But there was no trace of the author.

Then one night the producer was telling a friend of his about the missing writer, and the friend said: "Yes, I remember him. In fact, I know where he is—at home."

"We'll grab a cab and go to see him," the producer said.

"It will be a pretty steep taxi fare," the friend said.

"Why?"

"Because he's at home—in Jackson, Mississippi."

Suddenly the telephone rang and Hamish answered it. When he put down the receiver he turned to me. "Your cheque is at the desk," he said.

"Thank you," I said.
