Ken Watson's Curling

WANT TO BE A CHAMPION

Gary Thode and his rink from Saskatoon Technical Collegiate didn't win two consecutive Canadian School curling championships by mere luck. They were specially coached and trained to do just that.

A chance conversation last spring in Montreal with Mr. Ken Moir, a teacher, and the Thode rink mentor at the same school, illustrated this fact vividly. From the many boys at his school who wanted to join his special curling class, he selected those who:

- (1) Had good muscular co-ordination.
- (2) Were at least 75% in their school marks.
- (3) Were willing to sacrifice all other sports during the winter season.
- (4) Did not smoke or wanted to curl badly enough to give up smoking.
- (5) Had no girl-friends demanding attention during weekly practice sessions.
- (6) Would arrange their study hours so that they would not clash when ice was available for practice.
- (7) Were not noisy or boisterous by nature. (Ken Moir claims the noisy youth wilts when real pressure is on in a close game).

Examine the qualities above and you will find prerequisites for success in any field of endeavor—intelligence, physical well-being, self-discipline, self-sacrifice, concentration, determination, inner self-confidence.

Quite demanding as a coach is Moir, but look at his results—so much success that his boys won major trophies at the Saskatoon bonspiel and scared the living daylight out of the rinks they played against in the final round-robin of the Nipawin automobile bonspiel. Think it over, fellows! You can achieve anything if you want it badly enough.

BLACKWOOD on Bridge

By EASLEY BLACKWOOD

Double May Tell Opponent How To Play the Hand

When you are considering doubling a contract, freely reached by your opponents, there is more to think about than just the probable winners in your hand.

If you want to be a winner in the long run, you should also consider what you have to gain by the double and weigh that against what you stand to lose if something goes wrong and declarer wraps up his contract.

There are other important angles. For example, the answer to this question: Will my double tell declarer how to play the hand? And then there's always the Humanities angle.

Are the people you are playing against expert bidders and first-rate dummy players? If the answer to this last question is "yes," it's not a bad idea to lay off doubling until you're "certain" of at least a two trick set. That gives you a little leeway.

In today's deal Mr. Muzzy doubled the five-diamond bid and opened the ace of spades, which won. He led another spade and dummy's king won. Mr. Champion discarding a small heart.

Now, without the double, Mr. Champion undoubtedly would have planned to take two finesses against the two outstanding diamond honors. But since the double indicated that both honors were in Mr. Muzzy's hand, he changed to another line of play.

At trick three he led a spade and ruffed it in his hand. He cashed his three high clubs, discarding a heart and a spade from dummy. Next, he played the king and ace of hearts and ruffed his last heart on the board. He then pulled the last spade out and ruffed it.

With everybody down to three cards, he now led the jack of diamonds. Mr. Muzzy won with the queen and had to return a diamond away from his king into Mr. Champion's ace-ten.

Even granting the doubtful point that Mr. Muzzy had the cards for his double, his decision was faulty in all the other respects named above. He stood
