BLACKWOOD on Bridge
By EASLEY BLACKWOOD

His Skillful Play, Not Luck, Won for Mr. Masters

Mr. Champion considered his hand too strong for a double raise of his partner's spade bid. He decided to "wait" with a bid of two clubs until he found out more about Mr. Masters' holding.

Mr. Masters' second bid, a jump to three no trump, showed a hand well above a minimum opening and, with that information, Mr. Champion checked on aces and finally put the hand in six spades.

There was a possible loser in hearts and another in clubs. Mr. Masters took 12 tricks in a manner which amazed his faithful kibitzers, Mr. New and Mr. Muzzy.

The opening lead was a small diamond and Mr. Abel's queen fell to the ace. After taking three rounds of trumps, Mr. Masters lost no time in laying down the ace and king of hearts, dropping the doubleton queen.

"Such luck," said Mr. Muzzy, shaking his head. Of course, he would have fished the jack of hearts, losing to the queen. He also would have had to lose a club trick for down one.

LETTERBOX

Scow to the effect that the Brotherhood because of its Christian principles and Christian ideals cannot link itself with other organizations. We heard no such statement from the president or any other officer of the Brotherhood either during or since the convention. Therefore we must take it with a very heavy dose of salts.

In the first place, since reading your misleading story, the writer has personally checked with delegates from the convention, including a member of the resolutions committee. In every instance the delegates are of the firm opinion that the Brotherhood will work closely with the UFAW during salmon price negotiations this year. Your version is news to them and is being received as another brazen attempt to split and divide the fishermen rather than as accurate journalism.

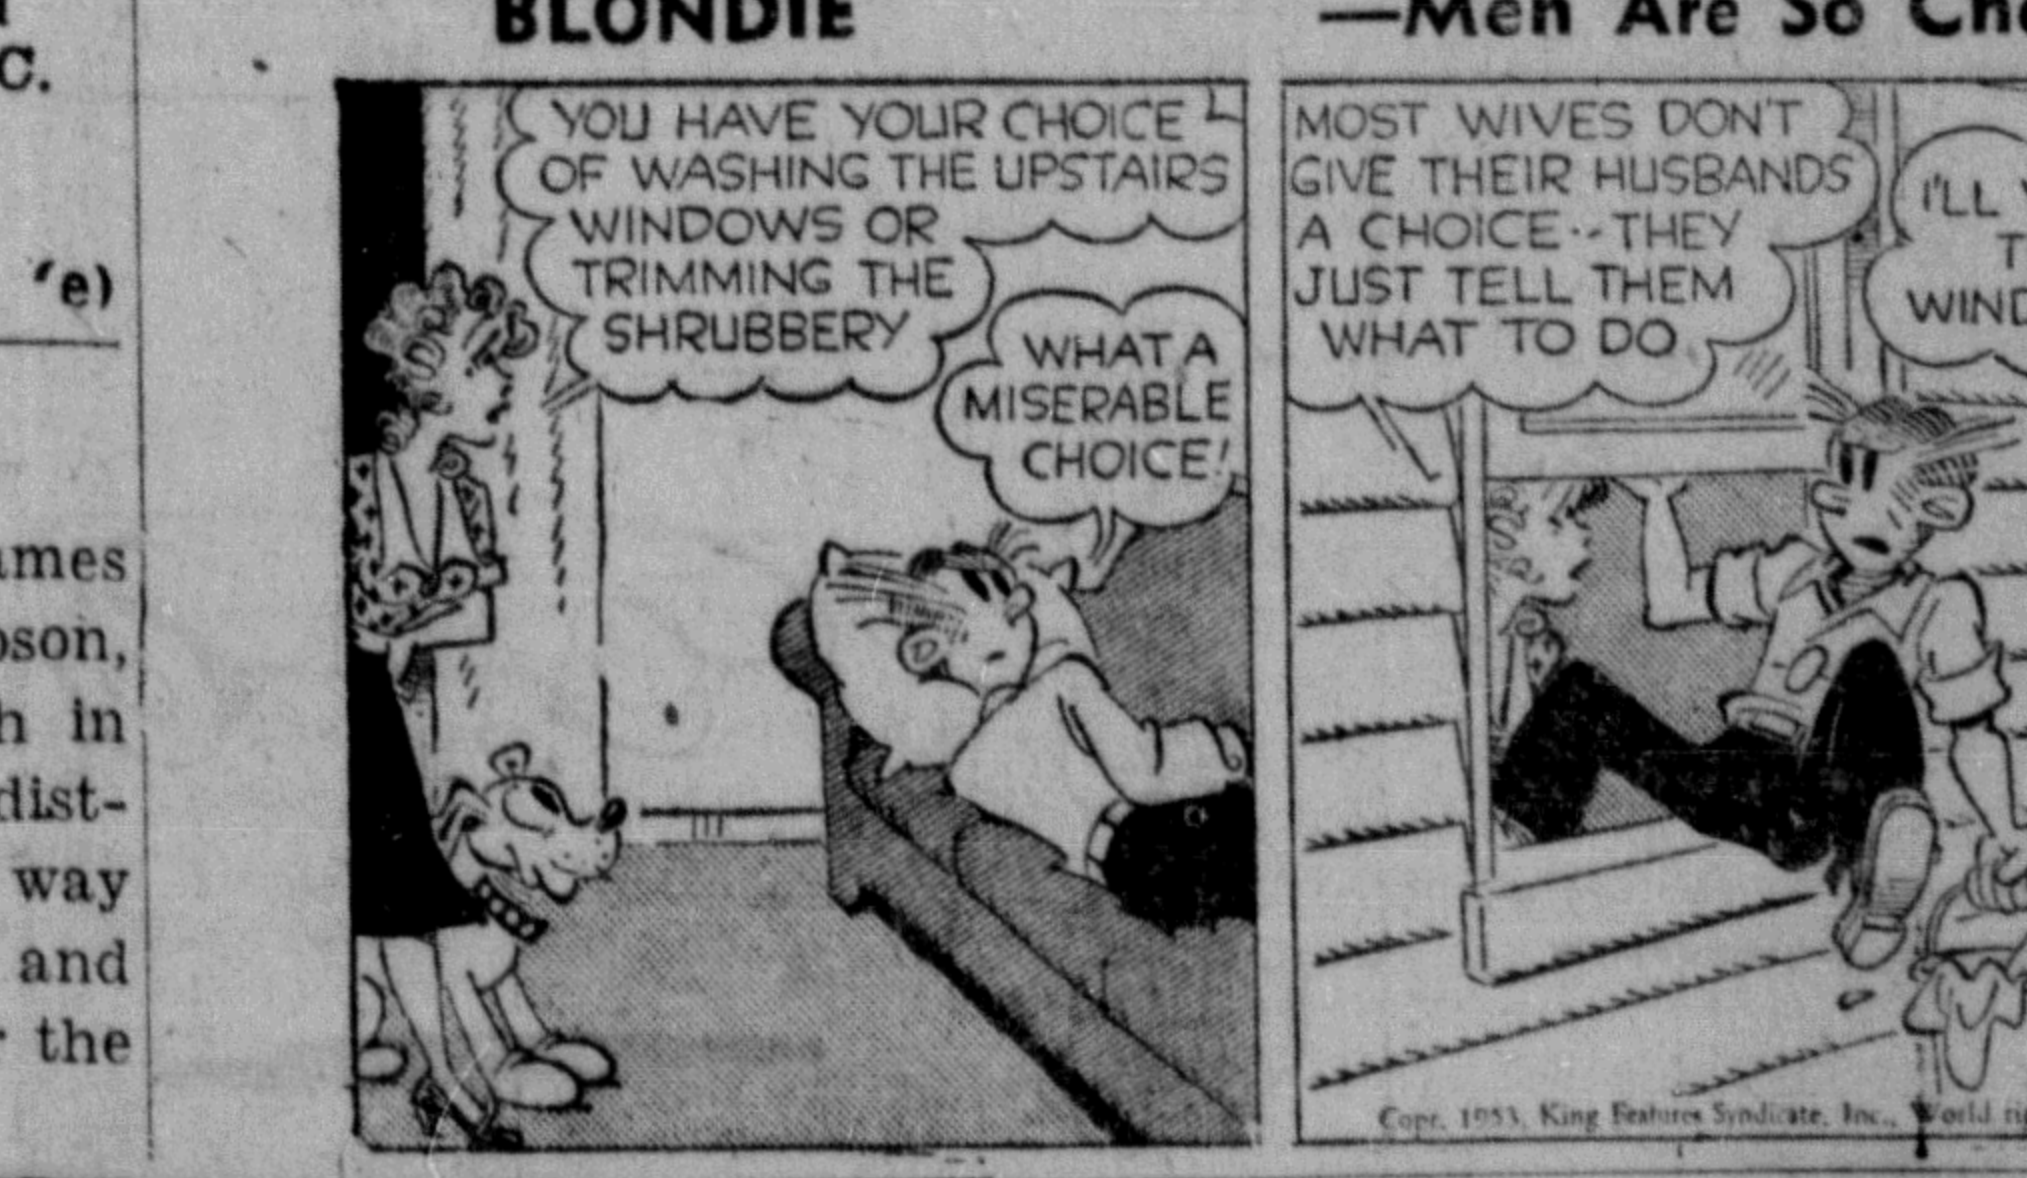

Secondly, it is difficult to find anything in Christ's teachings which would prevent Christians from linking themselves with their fellowmen to advance the common welfare. On the contrary Christ taught men to love their neighbours and to work together in unity for the good of all.

In conclusion may we point out that the only people who stand to gain from divisions between the UFAW and the Brotherhood are the owners of the fishing companies. Their policy of "Divide and Rule" is well known to the fishermen who suffered heavily through "separate bargaining" during the "hungry thirties." The overwhelming majority of fishermen, and this includes the majority of native fishermen, realize that unity is an absolute necessity in order to obtain decent minimum prices.

HOMER STEVENS,
General Secretary-Treasurer, United Fishermen and Allied Workers' Union.

(The Daily News quoted President Scow as saying: "We will co-operate with any organization only in salmon price agreements." This is substantially the same as Mr. Stevens' quotation and by no stretch of the imagination can be interpreted as acceptance of the UFAW's three-point proposal calling for a signed pledge of co-operation. Chief Scow's later statement was made to our reporter personally and was quoted accurately. Vancouver papers, each with its own reporter present, carried similar reports of the convention.—Editor.)
