Fish Board Okays Pact

JUNEAU (AP) - The Alaska fisheries board has approved the American - Canadian - Japanese fisheries agreement at its annual meeting here.

In an official statement, the group said it could see no reason to change its earlier approval of the agreement. Members said that opposition comes only from those who are not fully informed and from those who refuse to face the fact that Japan is once more a sovereign nation with all the rights of other nations to freedom of the seas.

However, the board urged the inclusion of an Alaskan on the board governing the international fishing agreement. And it recommended that species of fish other than salmon, halibut and herring be included under the protective measures.
