SPOUTING WHALES
 Whales do not actually spout water. The spurt often seen at sea is condensed moisture blown from their lungs.

BLACKWOOD on Bridge

By EASLEY BLACKWOOD
 Mrs. Keen Refuses To Hoard Small Trump; Mr. Dale's Jack Goes Up, So Does His Game

If you haven't added the play known as the perpet to your repertoire, I can assure you it is worth a little study. Sometimes it pays off in a most surprising way—as in today's deal.

Miss Brash won the first three tricks with her top club honors. Mrs. Keen discarded the deuce of diamonds on the third trick. It now appears that there are no more tricks for the defenders. But it was a little card in Mrs. Keen's hopeless-looking hand that spelled defeat for Mr. Dale.

At trick four Miss Brash led a fourth round of clubs. A small spade went on from the dummy and it was up to Mrs. Keen. If Mr. Muzzy had held the East hand he might have reasoned, "Why trump this trick when I know Dale can over-ruff?"

Mrs. Keen is not that kind of player. She has learned that it is automatic to ruff with your highest trump in this situation. In the first place her trumps were worthless as far as following suit to declarer's trump leads was concerned. She could hardly expect to take a trick with the seven spot.

It was her duty, however, to make declarer play a trump on this trick in the hope that such a play would set up a trump winner in partner's hand. The seven spot seemed a pitifully hopeless effort in this direction, but, as you see, the result was devastating.

HAD TO OVER-RUFF

Mr. Dale had to over-ruff with the jack or admit defeat then and there. After that, in spite of the fact that his hand and dummy consisted of practically nothing but honor cards, he had to concede a trick to Miss Brash's 10 of hearts.

If Mrs. Keen had discarded or trumped with the deuce of hearts at trick four, Mr. Dale would have made game and rubber without difficulty.
