Alaskan Cities Feel Pinch of Shipping Tieup

JUNEAU, Alaska (CP)—Growing shortages of food and supplies in several Alaska towns were reported yesterday as a result of the west coast shipping strike.

Some business men, awaiting supplies after a seven-month cut-off of ships during the ice pack season, wired an appeal to the Sailors Union Pacific (AFL). Officials of the island town of Sitka asked Gov. Ernest Gruening to try to get the Sailors Union to provide emergency service.

Shortages also are reported developing in Juneau and Ketchikan, two main cities of southeastern Alaska.

In a telephone call from Ketchikan, James G. Pinkerton, chairman of the Port of Ketchikan Committee, denied there was any shortage of supplies in that city.

Mr. Pinkerton said the city was "adequately provided" by chartered small boat service from Seattle.

Officials at Sitka report the

The strike which has knocked out Alaska Steamship Co. service is against the Pacific Maritime Association, which represents Alaska Steamships in labor negotiations.

Alaska Steamships is the only major U.S. line that serves southeastern Alaska and Nome in the northwest.
