BLACKWOOD on Bridge

By EASLEY BLACKWOOD

Mr. Muzzy's New Play Brings Him No Acclaim

Mr. Muzzy spends more time than most players arguing with kibitzers, gloating over some play which he (and usually he alone) considers to have been very fine and allying to his partners.

For these reasons he pulls more "wrong" cards than any body else. Of course these usually work to his disadvantage. But in today's deal he pulled a wrong one which gave Mr. Champion fits.

The opening lead by Mr. Dale was the six of spades and Mr. Muzzy won with the ace. Apparently he intended to return the 10. He took hold of it at one time. But he was still in the midst of a heated and pointless quarrel concerning the previous deal.

Finally, on urging from the other players, he came back to the current hand. Somehow he got his fingers on the king of hearts—and out it came.

At first Mr. Champion thought he had got a break. But it quickly dawned on him that this might be the killing return. The ace of hearts was the only entry to the board outside of the diamond suit and if one opponent had the ace of diamonds three long and held it up until the third lead of the suit....

Desperately hoping for a shift, Mr. Champion let the king of hearts hold. But Mr. Muzzy, sensing from Mr. Champion's expression that he didn't like the lead, led another heart. Dummy's ace won and the king of diamonds was led. Mr. Muzzy ducked. Next came the queen of diamonds on which Mr. Champion planned to play the jack. By a superhuman effort and after long thought, Mr. Muzzy ducked again.

"What did it. Dummy was now dead. Mr. Champion took a total of seven tricks. On a spade return at trick two he would have taken at least nine. Mr. Muzzy had executed the rare play known as the Deschapelier Coup.

"A new play has been born," said Mr. Champion disgustedly. "The play where you put any card from your hand at random and it turns out to be the only lead to beat the costumed." It gives me no pleasure to name it the Muzzy Coup.

ST. LOUIS (AP)—Meet a rat that draws money from a bank, and runs to a store to buy cheese, more valuable coin.

Other rats have learned to move a miniature car to reach food, use a flying trapeze or pull a chain to raise a ladder to climb to a high shelf.

Earlier, Dr. Tsai showed that cats and rats can be trained to co-operate and live in peace.

He reported Tuesday that a confirmed rat-killing cat had learned to leave peacefully and co-operate with a rat. The cat lets the rat run out of its cage, then both push treadles simultaneously to lower a window to reach their common dish of food.

This co-operation between so-called natural enemies proves there is no such thing as an instinct for fighting, Dr. Tsai declared.

This means that biologically, there is a basis for world peace, he said.

THE smart-money rat works it this way: The rat pulls a chain, to spill coins from a can hanging overhead. The rat picks up a coin in his mouth, runs over to put it on a saucer in exchange for cheese.

One rat learned the value of the coins, from getting the bigger reward by choosing the Switching to the problem of individual hospital finances, he said that the greatest increase in costs had been the amount paid for salaries and wages which now make up 65 to 70 per cent of all hospital costs.

The amount paid in wages and salaries was up 100 per cent in four years, from $2,500,000 in 1948 to $19,000,000 in 1952.

The health minister said that out of a total of 67 hospitals on firm budgets, 35 completed their 1951 operations with a surplus or a deficit of less than $500.

LATEST ESTIMATES
He said latest estimates for 1952 show 50 per cent of the 67 hospitals on firm budgets will show a surplus or break even and only 17 indicate they are operating at a total deficit of $114,000.

"Unfortunately, of the 17 hospitals reporting deficits for 1952, nine have had deficits for all four years since B.C.H.S. commenced operations.

"This may appear to indicate that these hospitals should investigate their overall operation and organization."

Mr. Martin concluded his address by saying that the people of B.C. have indicated that they have reached the point where they are no longer able to pay increased costs of hospital service.

"For that reason the government has taken the necessary steps to stabilize hospital and other costs," he said.

Girl Robot May Even Learn Speech

NEW YORK (AP) - An electronic robot named Audrey that can recognize spoken numbers and flash them on a lighted panel has been developed by Bell telephone laboratories.

It is a step toward a machine to translate the human voice directly into the printed word.

The device, as now rigged up, flashes the proper colored light to show which number it has just heard through an ordinary telephone handset. But it could equally well be connected to print the number, or operate a dial mechanism.

Ultimately, it is hoped to extend Audrey's vocabulary to include additional sounds—words other than numbers.

And, say Bell scientists, it might even be taught to say a few words on command—and in its own voice rather than a phonograph-like reproduction of the human voice it had just heard. So far, though, Audrey can recognize only single-digit numbers from zero through nine.

The name Audrey is a contraction of the machine's official description—automatic digit recognizer.
