BLACKWOOD on BRIDGE

By EASLEY BLACKWOOD

Mr. Heinsite Tiresome Even When He's Right

In talking about Mr. Heinsite I have dwelt mainly on his unreasonable attitude in expecting his partner to make impossible plays—this, of course, after he himself has seen all the cards.

Several correspondents have pointed out recently that there is one facet of his character which I have not touched upon or, at best, have not stressed sufficiently. They refer to the plain fact Mr. Heinsite is a bore. Yes, even when he is right (which isn't too often), he is tiresome.

In today's deal Mr. Abel won the first trick with the king of spades, then shifted to the 10 of clubs. Miss Brash won with the jack of clubs and ruffed a spade in dummy. She then cashed the ace of diamonds, ruffed a diamond in her hand and ruffed her last spade on the board. She lost only one spade and two trump tricks.

Mr. Heinsite promptly remarked Mr. Abel should have led the nine of hearts at trick two. Actually, this would not beat the hand because while Mr. Abel would win one more spade trick, he would also win one less trump trick.

Thinking hard now (Why? Why not get on to the next hand?), Mr. Heinsite noticed the contract could have been defeated if Mr. Abel had led specifically the king of hearts at the second trick.

He was right, Miss Brash would play the 10 from the board and win in her hand with the ace. Now is she ruffed a spade with the queen of hearts, Mr. Abel's jack and nine would both win. If she used the queen of hearts to pull another round of trumps, she would lose a trump trick and three spades.

Mr. Heinsite was so happy at having discovered this "obvious" play he held up the game for minutes while he explained it.

The other players were anxious to get on with the game. "Your story fascinates me to the point of nausea," remarked Miss Brash, "and if you don't mind..."

"I have a suggestion," said Mr. Dale. "We're just sitting around here doing nothing. What about it—anyone care for a rubber of bridge?"
