BLACKWOOD on Bridge

By EASLEY BLACKWOOD

Under Mr. Big's Stern Gaze, Abel Quails — And Muffs

Mr. Champion practically never makes an error, either in bidding or play. He wonders why he doesn't win more than he does. The principal reason is that he bullies his partners so that they never play their best games.

Mr. Abel is especially sensitive to this kind of treatment. He tried so hard on this hand that he completely overlooked the winning play.

The opening lead was the deuce of spades and he won in his own hand with the jack. He led the trey of diamonds and finessed dummy's queen. Mr. Dale won with the king and returned a spade to dummy's ace.

Now Mr. Abel led a low diamond to his jack and paled when Mrs. Keen showed out, discarding a spade. It was now proven that Mr. Dale still had a diamond stopper.

The hand now added four spade winners, three in hearts, and only two in diamonds. That made only nine and it was therefore necessary to risk the club finesse in an effort to pick up the necessary three tricks in that suit.

When Mrs. Keen showed up with the queen of clubs the contract was down.

"I could have finessed the eight of diamonds on the second diamond lead," said Mr. Abel, trying to beat Mr. Champion to the punch.

"And possibly have the lone 10 make in Mrs. Keen's hand?" replied Mr. Champion disgustedly. "You don't have to do that. Just play the ace of diamonds first, then lead a little one toward your jack.

"If Dale goes in with the king your troubles are over. If he doesn't, then play your jack. Now, if Mrs. Keen follows suit, the diamonds have broken 3-2 and you have to lose only to the king. You're bound to make four diamond tricks.

"As it actually was," Mr. Champion continued, "Mrs. Keen would show out on the second diamond. BUT you haven't lost a trick yet. Now you can go to dummy and take the club finesse. Even if it loses, Mrs. Keen can't return a diamond and you're going to win three club tricks—enough for your contract."

As usual, Mr. Champion was right. But unfortunately this kind of being right doesn't show up on the score.

POLITICAL ROUNDUP

He took no chances, though, and campaigned as fervently as ever.

The 1949 result: Dr. J. Lorne MacDougall, 10,630; Cecil Merritt, 10,630; Webster, 8,389. It was hopeless, everyone said—everyone but Webster. No, he wouldn't try for the Provincial house; he'd just wait for the next Federal election and then he'd make it, sure.

While he was waiting he got into the thick of last June's provincial election. He concentrated on the Liberals; like everyone else, he was sure those Social Credit people hadn't a chance.

The Liberals took the full brunt of some of Webster's orations: "I do not know of any influence on B.C. public life more corrupting, more damaging than the Liberal organization in this city (Vancouver). Some day, when the people's eyes are opened, there will be a great revolt against the activities financed and carried on by the Liberal Party."

Thus did Webster get even with Gerry McGeer and Lorne MacDougal. And, if he was dismayed at Social Credit success, he must have taken some personal satisfaction in the Liberal rout in Vancouver.

Through all the years he has been a C.C.F. pillar. Not only does he make speeches, but he pitches in and does hard work too. He's a great one to collect money for the C.C.F. cause.

Last June, at a huge meeting in Pender auditorium he stood on the platform and pleaded for money. He left aloft dollar bills, and five dollar bills, and he jingled silver; he clowned, he talked, he said he'd even sing. More, more, more—more money—he cried, more money for the C.C.F. And he wouldn't sit down until he'd drained the last drainable drop out of that meeting.

When the hat was counted there was the astonishing sum of $359.93. Webster was almost exhausted, but that didn't matter—he'd try again any old time for his beloved C.C.F.

Now he's going campaigning for a seat in the B.C. Legislature. That House of Commons seat will just have to wait for him.
