Piet Strydom Plans Comeback

JOHANNESBURG (CP)—Piet Strydom, who quit the ring when he was South African heavyweight champion because he said boxing didn't agree with his religion, is going to make a comeback to "regain the title for my family," Strydom said he made his decision after listening to a broadcast Saturday night of a South African title fight between his younger brother, Lou, and Arthur.

Although ahead on points, Lou Strydom was forced to quit after nine mauling rounds because of a badly cut eye. Piet said he would fight Arthur for the title without any warm-up bouts if the boxing board of control will agree. Piet Strydom won the South African heavyweight title in 1950 and retired in July, 1952.
