

Popular Telegraph Agent Transferred To Regina

William E. (Bill) Simmons, 236 Eleventh Street, National Telegraph manager here for the past five years leaves Saturday night for his new post at Regina, as manager.

Simmons was announced as successor to George Aldcroft, of Vancouver, who will make the official transfer.

Mr. Aldcroft arrives tonight accompanied by L. P. Bayzand, supervisor of the Edmonton office, who will make the official transfer.

Yesterday, the staffs of the district office ticket office, the repeater station and the telegraph office said farewell to Mr. Simmons. Gordon Dockendorf, repeater station manager, presented on behalf of the gathering a gladstone bag to Mr. Simmons.

Earlier, a farewell party was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Simmons by friends who made a presentation of a silver rose bowl. The gathering included Mr. and Mrs. Bill McAra, Mr. and Mrs. A. P. Crawley, Mr. and Mrs. J. McGregor, Mr. and Mrs. Alex Cimbella and Mr. and Mrs. Ed Mussallem.

Mr. Aldcroft, who will be CNT manager here, was manager at the New Westminster office from 1943 to 1946 and since has been commercial representative in Vancouver in which capacity he has become well known in business circles on the Pacific Coast.

He is extremely interested in service club work and served as president of the New Westminster Kiwanis Club for one term. He is married and has two sons.

"By his previous record he should be well qualified to service communication needs in the Prince Rupert area," said Mr. Radford.

Simmons has only good things to say about his work in Prince Rupert. "I have enjoyed my work here and have made many friends here and have made many friends here and have made many friends here."

Women Natural On Assessments

TORONTO (CP)—There's a group of doorbell-ringers here who easily hurdle the hardest question of all without getting the door slammed in their faces or bitten by the family dog.

The hard question? Asking a woman how old she is. The reason the interviewers can get away with it is that they're all women. For the first time in the history of Toronto's assessment department, women are doing most of the leg work and lifting much of the burden from the shoulders of regular assessors.

The women travel door to door in residential districts, gathering information used in preparing voters' and jury lists and population figures.

The women knock on 70 to 90 doors in the course of a day's work.

Annual Teachers' Convention Considers Local Resolutions

Resolutions emanating from the Prince Rupert District Teachers' Association have received considerable consideration at the annual convention during the week-end at the regular meeting of the local association last night.

Resolutions called for inclusion of each pupil in the school on loan by the district of education. The desirability of reading books for each primary-grade of large size was previously the subject of a school with the resolution regarding the need for higher certification had been referred to a committee.

Resolutions called for a system of certification other than the present one included in the curriculum.

Other committee reports were considered, with the information that the local Trades and Labour Council had offered to provide a biennial scholarship, in addition to the one provided by the school board and the Canadian Legion available for local students.

A vote of thanks was cordially endorsed to members of the executive who may not be returning to the city to teach in the fall, for their work during the year.

President John R. Wilson, of the Booth Memorial High School staff, was in the chair.
