End-Play Forces Opponent To Lead

Prince Kuperi Dully INEWS

Friday February 19 1959

For the next few days, the column will be principally for those who haven't played bridge long and who have yet to experience the thrill of planning and executing an end play. The play involves throwing an opponent in the lead, at a time when anything he returns will be to his disadvantage. I will show you how to recognize the conditions under which the play becomes possible.

In today's deal, three no trump would have been an easier contract but of course there is nothing delicate about Miss Brash's bidding and she quickly by-passed that spot for a contract of four spades.

When the ten of clubs was opened and the dummy went down, she saw that she had only nine trick off the top. She played low from dummy and won with the ace, Mr. Abel signaling with the eight spot.

She then cashed three rounds of spades and followed with the lead of the deuce of clubs. Pass Mrs. Keen played the seven, the An Pass nine went on from dummy and Mr. Abel you with the queen.

Mr. Abel was fixed. Anything he returned would lose a trick. If he led the king of clubs, Miss Brash would ruff and dummy's jack would then furnish a discard for a diamond. If he led a diamond, Miss

.04% Brash could never lose more .18% than one trick in that suit. If he led the king of hearts, Miss Brash would let it hold and then .081/2 he would be right back where he started. Here are two things to remember about endplays. The first is that you can often win a .101/4 trick only if you have the nriv-60.00 ilege of playing last. In today's

.131/2 Leaf Miss Brash could pick up a furned in three different suits-

1.04 trick on anything Mr. Abel re-

.131/2 because dummy would play last. 3.95 If Miss Brash had broken either red suit herself, the enemy would have had the advantage as Mr. Abel would have played last to the trick. The second thing is that the term "end-play" is actually a misnomer. A defender can be end-played early in a hand - sometimes as early as the very first trick.
