Tom Meany Names Greatest Pitchers in Ball History

Tom Meany has written another book—"Baseball's Greatest Pitchers." A Brooklyn boy who covered the Dodgers, Yankees and Giants at one time or another while on the sports staffs of New York newspapers, Meany not only has seen most of the characters included in the tale of "Baseball's Greatest Pitchers," but he can call practically all of them friends.

The life stories of these greatest moundsmen are generously spiced with personal experiences and often rarely told or previously untold sidelights.

But Meany's choice of top hurlers should satisfy most of his readers.

THOSE LISTED

Listed alphabetically, "Baseball's Greatest Pitchers" are as follows: Old Pete Alexander, Ewell Blackwell, Dizzy Dean, Red Faber, Bob Feller, Lefty Gomez, Burleigh Grimes, Lefty Grove, Waite Hoyt, Carl Hubbell, Larry Jansen, Walter Johnson, Bob Lemon, Ted Lyons, Christy Mathewson, Joe McGinnity, Hal Newhauser, Herb Pennock, Eddie Plank, Vic Raschi, Dazzy Vance, Rube Waddell, Ed Walsh, Buckey Watters, and, of course, Cy Young.

In his preface, Meany admits that he had trouble eliminating a number of others—fellow like Chief Bender, Red Ruffing, Mel Harder, Eddie Cicotte, Sam Jones, Joe Wood, Paul Derringer, Earl Whitehill, Jack Quinn, Bobo Newsom, Carl Mays, Urban Shocker, Stan Clevleski, George Uhle and Rube Marquard.

Unlike most "greatest" authors, Meany has not ignored the present generation. The last time we looked, Blackwell, Feller, Jansen, Lemon, Newhauser and Raschi were still pitching in the majors.

CONSIDERED BALL

In making his selections, the author took the lively ball into consideration. With the exception of Young and McGinnity, who began pitching in the middle 1900s, all have worked in this century. Because men like Kid Nichols, Horse Radbourne and Amos Rusle toiled chiefly in the 19th century, they were omitted.

It was not possible for the grandstand and bleached crowds of today to see some of the mound greats of the distant past walk to the rubber and fire their stuff past astonished hitters. Aces like Cy Young, Walter Johnson, Christy Mathewson and a few others can be no more than names in the record book.

Eilers Are Still Winning Games

Although travel-weary and fatigued, Vancouver Eilers Senior basketball team managed to win their first game after return home to Vancouver following their recent trip to Prince Rupert. The won a close 51 to 46 victory over Alberni Athletics at the King Edward gym in Vancouver.

According to a Vancouver newspaper, the next time the Eilers plan a trip north it will not be in mid-winter.

On the way here, the Eilers were grounded for two days at Ocean Falls and had to abandon their airplane for steamer. Then they come on here to have two of their star players injured in the series with the local all-star Co-op Challengers.

Smithers Bonspiel

SMITHERS—Smithers Curling Club will be holding its annual bonspiel commencing Friday of this week with rinks from various parts of the district joining the local rinks in the various competitions. Thirty teams are now in preliminary competition.

Women curlers are also active here with Kay Senkpiel as president of their club; Inez Herman, secretary, and Irma Bannister, treasurer.

The first electric plant for lighting purposes in the United States was built at San Francisco in 1879.

The first automobile powered by a steam motor was produced by the French inventor Nicholas Cugnot in 1769.

BIRD-BANDING STARTS—In co-operation with the United States Fish and Wildlife Society, a bird-banding program at Coote's Paradise Marsh near Hamilton, Ont., has been begun by the Hamilton Botanical Gardens. Gulls, terns, herons, all ducks and, possibly, swans will be included. Shown is James Law of the Garden staff releasing the first banded duck.

Sedgman Plans Amateur Career

SYDNEY—Frank Sedgman, Australian Davis Cup ace, said Jan. 5: "It seems pretty certain now that I will remain an amateur for life." Writing in Sydney's Sunday Telegraph, the 24-year-old tennis ace said: "I will try to establish myself in the business world in the next half-dozen years while tapering off my international tennis career."

Speed Skating Pair Training For Olympics

WINNIPEG — A 10-by-five foot shack and an oval track of about 440 yards on the Red River is the training camp of two of Canada's four-man Olympic speed-skating team. It is situated behind Kildonan Park in the northern suburbs.

Buf. Frank Stack and Gordon Audley, both of Winnipeg, aren't squawking. They're happy they have a spot to work out at all.

unable to get a spot for practice at any of the city rinks, Stack and Audley, who compete in the Feb. 14-25 Winter Olympics at Oslo, and a handful of other speed-skating enthusiasts cleaned an oval track on the river as soon as it froze over in late November. Earlier in the month, they had been working out on a frozen-over gravel pit at Bird's Hill, 12 miles out of the city.

Other Olympic speed-skating teams already are training in Norway in preparation of the games. But, the Canadian boys apparently will make a last-minute jaunt to the scene after working out on their own hook at home. The other two members of the Canadian squad are Craig McKay of Saskatoon and Ralph Olin of Calgary.

Any clear night from 7:30 p.m. to 9:30, Stack and Audley and others are speeding up and down the river. It doesn't matter if it is 10 above or 30 below.

It's a bit of a struggle to get into "Stack's Shack" on the Red River. The structure was moved from the downtown area at the skaters' expense after the original shack was lost in the 1950 spring flood. A worn-out stove provides much-needed heat and a coal-oil lamp supplies a faint light. The skaters generally work out in shifts to make room in their "headquarters."

Stack lives close by and travels in his small car to and from the shack. Audley lives on the far side of the city, suburban St. James on the west end, and takes a street car—an hour's ride each way. And it's about a 1½-mile walk to the river from the car stop.

VETERAN STAR

Despite these adverse conditions, the veteran Stack—he was 46 on New Year's Day—continues to show the brilliant form which gained him the senior men's crown at the Dominion finals in Winnipeg last February. In capturing his fourth Canadian title, Stack made a clean sweep of the six events. Audley was runner-up.

For Stack the 1952 Olympics will be his third test. He com-

MIXED BOWLING LEAGUE

R. Tubb conquered last week's bowling meet with a high single in the men's division with score of 299, while B. Kaines took high three game honors with 727. In the ladies' division, A. Whatman was high all around with 291 for a single and 706 for a three-game total.

In team play, Pushovers and Canadian General Electric tied for single high score of 1268. Wallace's took high three with 345.

peted in the 1932 games at Lake Placid, N.Y., and again in 1948 at Switzerland. His best effort was a tie for fourth in the 500-metre event.

Stack won his first outside championship at the age of 14 at St. Paul, Minn., and has captured more than 503 trophies and medals in his long career.

Audley, 23, is the youngest member of the speed-skating team.

He has been speed skating for about 13 years and came up through the midget, juvenile, junior and intermediate ranks, heading practically every division in his climb to the senior team.

Last winter, Gordon turned in the fastest time for 500 metres in the Olympic trials at Saskatoon. Although placing 17th in the 1948 games at Switzerland, Audley's time in the 500 metres was only two seconds off the winner.

Both Stack and Audley consider the Norwegians the top skaters in the world.

Frank said: "They have the coaching, proper trainers, facilities and the public's encouragement. We have little of this."

Union steamer Camosun, Capt. John Boden, returned to port at 11:45 this morning from Alice Arm and Stewart and, after loading a carload of frozen fish from Atlin Fisheries, sailed at 1:30 p.m. for Vancouver and waypoints.
