BLACKWOOD on BRIDGE

By EASLEY BLACKWOOD
Long Analysis Blurs Thought, Hurts Play
 Mr. Heinsite's long dissertations after every hand are not only boring to the other players. They are also costly to him and, of course, to his partner.

In today's deal Mr. Abel got into a sound heart slam. As usual, Miss Brash got off to an aggressive rather than a waiting lead. She led the seven of spades. Mr. Abel won with the jack and paused to consider his play.

Suppose he led the ace of diamonds at once and it got trumped? How would he handle the hand then? What would he do if the trumps were 4-1? After much worrying he led a heart to the ace and a small heart back to his queen. Breathing easier when the suit broke evenly, he now laid down the ace of diamonds. At this point, he would make the hand even if somebody ruffed. That is, he would win two tricks in spades, three in diamonds, the ace of clubs, five trump tricks and a club ruff in dummy.

But everybody followed to the ace of diamonds and Mr. Abel then led a heart to dummy's king and claimed the balance, making all 13 tricks.

It is difficult indeed to do better than this but Mr. Heinsite was not pleased. "Such play!" he snorted. "You should protect against a 4-1 trump break which was much more likely than a diamond void. Play the queen of hearts at trick two and the ace of diamonds at trick three. Now play dummy's king of hearts and if either opponent shows out, you just lead diamonds until someone trumps. That will be the only trick they get."

"Even if the ace of diamonds gets ruffed," he continued, "you're still all right if Dale

MELVIN ROBINSON, 70-year-old blind retired farmer has built his own miniature midway which is popular with the children of Ailsa Craig, near London, Ont. He built and runs a ferris wheel, merry-go-round and other rides with power from one electric motor.

THIS MURAL, 22 by nine feet, is a gift for the children in War Memorial Hospital at London, Ont., from artist William O. Moore, who had the children help him paint it. The woodland nursery painting is on a wall of the hospital's third-floor corridor.
