duties to the city engineering in an advisory capacity.

There is an opinion among its members that, under the present arrangement, costs of operation are too high for the value received. In addition, the members have insufficient time to supervise operations personally.

In clarifying the board's position, chairman Pat Forman emphasized today that more progress was being made than was indicated at the meeting.

"Among other things, we have just opened the new park named after Alderman George Casey, and work on McClymont park is going well," he said.
