Poppy Day Tomorrow In Rupert

Bright red poppies, symbols of remembrance, will be worn on every lapel tomorrow, Poppy Day in Prince Rupert.

One of the major events in Legion Week, leading up to Remembrance Day observances next Wednesday, Poppy Day will see some 40 youngsters on the streets in Prince Rupert, selling the bright flowers, brave reminders that there are still men and women suffering the effects of two world wars.

Handicapped war veterans make their living manufacturing the poppies, and proceeds of local poppy sales help those men in the Vet-Craft shops, as well as aiding Prince Rupert district veterans.

More than half of the proceeds of the poppy sales remain with Branch 27 of the Canadian Legion, and the poppy funds are earmarked specifically for relief of veterans and their dependants in this district.

The Legion Women's Auxiliary is in charge of the poppy distributions. School children in the city will receive their poppies today. Poppy wreaths have already been sold to organizations planning to lay them at the cenotaph Wednesday.

Other major events of Legion Week include a "Bring the Missus" night tonight at the Legion hall at which an amateur program will be staged with Mrs. Jim Black and R. J. Bone in charge.

Sunday Legionnaires will parade to The Salvation Army hall for a special service, with J. S. Wilson in charge of the parade, and Legion Week will be climaxed by the annual remembrance service at the cenotaph Wednesday morning, followed by a Legion banquet and the annual remembrance ball Wednesday night.

Hospitalized Rupert Cub Wins Badges

Young Meldrum Souter, Prince Rupert Wolf Cub now in hospital in Vancouver suffering a spinal infection, has not been forgotten by the Scout movement.

The 10-year-old boy, son of Mr. and Mrs. Doug Souter, 215 Fourth Avenue West, has been presented with two badges by the Greater Vancouver Scout Council which looks after handicapped Cubs and Scouts.

The two badges, athlete and team player, were earned by Mel before he was hospitalized. He passed tests last spring for the athlete badge, and his work in the Little League, on the Wild Cat team earned him the team player badge.

Word of the presentation was received here from Area Commissioner J. A. Bramham for Kitsilano-Fairview Boy Scouts.
