Actor Drops 576-Foot Putt For Hole-in-One

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Actor Cameron Mitchell qualified for the hole-in-one club with what he thinks must be the longest putt on record—576 feet.

Mitchell was golfing at the Fox Hills course and "not doing too well."

Members of his foursome started kidding him and on the 192-yard 15th hole, someone remarked:

"Try the putter. You can't do any worse with it."

Cameron did.

The ball went half way on the fly, then bounced a few times and rolled into the cup.

His ace was certified by Mel Winrod and Len and Glyndon Riley at the clubhouse.

The ace didn't help the actor's score much, however. He shot an 86.

FOX PROOFING RABBIT HOUNDS

SOMETIMES IT IS DIFFICULT TO PREVENT A RABBIT HOUND STRAYING FROM THE HOT TRAIL OF A COTTON-TAIL TO CHASE A FOX THAT HAS CROSSED THE TRAIL. THIS USUALLY RESULTS IN LOST TIME AND NO GAME.

THIS TENDENCY CAN OFTEN BE CORRECTED IF A YOUNG TAME FOX CAN BE KEPT NEAR THE HOUND AT HOME. THE HOUND SHOULD ALWAYS BE RESTRAINED FROM ATTACKING THE FOX AND THE TAME FOX IS NOT LIKELY TO TEASE HIM. IN TIMES THE HOUND LEARNS THAT FOX IS NOT GAME. THE BATTLE IS WON AND BOTH MAY BECOME FRIENDS!

WATCH YOUR FEET! (Part 2)

Sloppy footwork spoils a lot of shots, particularly in the case of curlers who use a fairly high backswing. The rock and the left foot occasionally collide with each other as they slide forward together at the end of the delivery motion. Perfect timing is necessary to synchronize the two motions and hours of practice are required to perfect them. With the true slider, the stone and the left foot never collide after the rock reaches the ice, because the stone is always ahead of the left foot. (Note the illustration above). Sometimes the stone will bump against the left foot if you are off-balance, and the left leg is thrown forward too soon as a result of it.

However, if you tend to set the stone down on the ice with the idea of riding on it, you'll have lots of leg-bumping trouble. Swing your stone (on the forward swing) well out ahead of you, and you will seldom have foot trouble.

When you swing your left leg forward with the stone, the shoe will be flat on the ice, but as you reach forward with your right arm and lower your body closer to the ice, your left knee will bend sideways to the left. This will raise your left heel off the ice and you complete your slide riding on the ball of your left foot.

Now, back to the hack again to take a look at the right foot. Remember the toe of the right foot in the hack should be pointing straight up the ice or at worst, very slightly to the right. Be sure you are solid in the hack. The only thing left to remember about the right foot here on is to be conscious after you push off from the hack that the right leg and foot are stretched out straight back behind you. Only by being conscious of this will you be right on the broom with your body as well as your mind.

BLACKWOOD on Bridge

Overall Bid Vulnerable
Dangerous on Weak Holding

This hand was a dangerous misfit for both sides. Whoever got the bid was in for a lot of trouble. After Mr. Abel doubled Mr. Champion's two club over-call, Mrs. Keen started thinking about her next bid. She wasn't quite sure whether she should rebid her spades or bid two diamonds. One thing was sure—she was not going to let the double stand.

With a disgusted snort, Mr. Champion bid three clubs and Mr. Abel doubled again. This time Mrs. Keen felt justified in letting the double stand.

Mr. Champion went down one, 200 points, losing two clubs, two spades and a heart. This was not a big loss, of course, and it is true that Mr. Champion would not have been permitted to play two clubs doubled because Mrs. Keen would have taken it out.

The point is, however, that if Mr. New had passed, as he should have, there was an excellent chance that Mrs. Keen and Mr. Abel would get into a contract which they could not make.

"Why would you take me out of two clubs, New?" inquired Mr. Champion.

"I couldn't stand clubs. I had a singleton," Mr. New replied.

"You could stand two clubs a lot better than you could stand what would have happened to you at diamonds," barked Mr. Champion. "If I had wanted you to show your best suit I would have doubled. Since I didn't double, I wasn't overcall at your suit. When I overcall at the two level vulnerable, you don't need to worry about rescuing me."

Mr. Champion was right. There was no reason for Mr. New to think that two diamonds would be any better than two clubs. Here is a good rule to follow. When partner is doubled, don't rescue unless, before you heard the double, you had planned to make a free bid and a constructive move toward game.

Young Girl Wins Skating Title

EDMONTON (CP)—The smooth and near-perfection of a champion has given 15-year-old Sonja Currie of Calgary and Edmonton her second straight Western Canada senior women's singles figure skating title. The young, blonde miss whirled her way to the top here in a field of 11 to retain the crown she won last year at Vancouver.

The smiling confidence and graceful ease with which she won the title also brought her the most artistic skater award. In senior men's singles, 22-year-old Norman Walker of the Vancouver Connaught Club defeated clubmate Brian Power to succeed Billy Lewis of Vancouver as Western titleholder. Lewis did not defend his crown.
