SKILL IN TRANSPLANTING SAVES PLANTS FROM SHOCK

Transplanting, the movement of a plant from one location to another, is garden surgery. It administers a shock to the plant which may be compared to the effects of an operation. Most plants will recover, even though the operator is unskilled, but there are a few simple precautions which will increase the percentage of success.
If you are growing your own plants, prepare them for the experience by giving an extra feeding a week before the operation. In a bucket of water (2½ gallons) hang a cloth bag containing 10 ounces of your regular plant food, four ounces to the gallon. Let it soak overnight, then water the flat with the solution. This will build up the energy of your plants for the ordeal to come.
The night before the operation prepare another bucket of water the same way, or by using a soluble plant food according to the instructions for a starter solution. Take it to the garden along with the plants.
It is important to disturb the roots of plants as little as possible. If they are in pots, the soil will come out in a ball with little disturbance. If in a flat, they can be lifted with small injury, by taking care. Transplants which have been purchased without soil should not be allowed to dry out, and be kept in the shade.
Dig a hole large enough to hold the plant roots with room to spare, and deeper than necessary. Mix a teaspoonful of plant food with soil at the bot-

BLACKWOOD on Bridge

By EASLEY BLACKWOOD

Mr. Meek Plays Safe but Gets Squeezed
One thing a defender should never forget is the importance of declarer of entries between his hand and dummy.

Mr. Champion made this slam contract on a squeeze. But the squeeze could not have been executed if the defenders had played a certain way.

Mr. Meek opened the queen of clubs and Mr. Champion won with the king. Mrs. Keen playing the deuce on the trick. Now, how would you proceed from this point? There was one possible loser in hearts and one in diamonds, if the latter suit failed to break 3-3.

If Mrs. Keen had the king of hearts, dummy could be entered with the ace of spades and a heart finesse would eliminate the loser in that suit.

Another line of play was to take a spade finesse and, if successful, throw the six of diamonds on the ace of spades.

Mr. Champion's final decision was to lay down the ace and another heart and await developments. Mr. Meek won the second heart and could have ruined the squeeze by returning a spade. If Mr. Champion finessed the spades, Mrs. Keen's king would win the setting trick. If he went up with the ace, he would be using up dummy's last entry.

But Mr. Meek, playing safe as usual, returned the ten of clubs. Mr. Champion won with the ace, cashed three more trumps, then laid down his three top diamonds.

Next came the last trump, getting everybody down to two cards. Mr. Meek couldn't discard his jack of clubs without making dummy's nine good so he reduced to one spade. The nine of clubs was played from dummy, leaving there only the ace and queen of spades.

Now Mrs. Keen was forced to keep the jack of diamonds to beat Mr. Champion's six spot and she, too, had to discard a

South African Fight Goes On

CAPETOWN (P)—South African House of Assembly yesterday rejected by a vote of 78 to 61 an opposition demand that the government accept a Supreme Court judgment which invalidated the government's law on voters of mixed blood.

The law removed such voters from the common registrar. Earlier, Minister of the Interior Eben Dongas announced he would introduce in the Assembly today a bill establishing a "High Court of Parliament."

The bill is part of the Nationalist government's campaign to prevent existing courts from invalidating Parliamentary legislation.
