Analysis May Distract Partner in Next Hand

On the hand before this one, Mr. Heinsite had explained the five no trump grand slam force in great detail to Mr. Abel. It is a conventional call, asking partner to go ahead to a grand slam if he has two of the top honors in the agreed suit.

Mr. Abel became intrigued with the idea. In today's deal he used the bid himself but Mr. Heinsite, holding only one of the three top spade honors, signed off at six spades.

Mr. Dale opened the jack of diamonds and the ace won. Now Mr. Abel promptly laid down the ace of spades. He paled as Mr. Dale showed out, discarding a small heart. Later he lost two spade tricks to Mr. Champion for a minus score on his big hand.

He overlooked the simple safety play with this trump holding, that of leading a small spade toward dummy and just covering whatever spade Mr. Dale played. Thus if Mr. Dale held all four outstanding spades and played the five on the first lead, dummy's nine would win. Or, if Mr. Dale put up an honor, dummy's king would capture it, the nine would drive out his other honor and Mr. Abel's ace and 10 would pick up his two small ones.

As the cards actually were, Mr. Dale would show out and dummy's king would win. On the return of the nine, Mr. Champion could cover or not as he chose, but he could never win more than one trump trick.

In other words, the lead of a small spade first would absolutely guarantee no more than one spade loser no matter how the trump suit was divided.

Normally Mr. Abel would have made this safety play. He knows about it and has made it before. But in this rubber, his mind was engrossed in the analysis Mr. Heinsite had been

Great Crowds Greet Queen

CHRISTCHURCH, N.Z. (AP)—Queen Elizabeth and the Duke of Edinburgh reached Christchurch tonight on their New Zealand tour after travelling by train through the magnificent "southern Alps."

To maintain schedule the train had to roar through a number of stations where crowds had gathered for a glimpse of the royal couple.

A surging mass of people greeted them at Christchurch station. Army and air force trainees helped police hold them back until the Queen and duke stepped from their car at the Clarendon hotel, where they are to stay. Then the crowd broke the cordon for a close view of the royal couple before they disappeared inside.

The Queen and duke have no official engagements tonight.

Credit Women Review Course

Members of the Credit Women's Breakfast Club met at the home of Mrs. Jocelyn Bolton Sunday afternoon to review their credit educational course in preparation for examinations which will be held near the end of January.

This will complete the second year of study of retail credit methods by the club. Award certificates are given by the National Retail Credit Association to all club members passing the tests each year, with a diploma to each one completing the five-year credit course.

Educational Chairman Mildred Olson now has the new study manuals for this year's course and will be giving them out to members early in February.

'Father of Bride' To Open Ambitious Drama Program

The Prince Rupert Little Theatre this month will launch its most ambitious program to date, with sponsorship of the smash Broadway hit, "Father of the Bride," to be staged January 31 by the Terrace Civic Centre Drama Association.

The Terrace play will be the first of five major Broadway productions to be staged here, with the other four planned by the local Little Theatre players themselves.

The four plays will be chosen for wide appeal, as evidenced by long runs on Broadway, and for their adaptability to the instruction of drama here, another new project planned by the Little Theatre.

Instrumental in planning the ambitious program is Ian Dobbie, professional dramatic director now residing here, who has agreed to direct Little Theatre productions and launch classes in all phases of dramatic work here.

Best known for his work in directing the Totem Theatre in Vancouver and the Vancouver Little Theatre, Mr. Dobbie has also seen action on stage in his native England and in many points throughout Canada and the United States, including Montreal, New York, New Orleans and Boston.

Along with leaders of the local Little Theatre, Mr. Dobbie feels there is no lack of dramatic talent in Prince Rupert, and hopes to utilize that talent in this year's comprehensive program.

The opening play of this year's program played to an audience of over 750 in Terrace. "Father of the Bride" is a laugh-filled story of the stormy path to the altar of Father's eldest daughter.

Directed by Mrs. Loreen McColl, the play stars Bud McColl, Edna Cooper, Carol Dale and Roy Paulson.
