BLACKWOOD on Bridge

By EASLEY BLACKWOOD
Partner Can Defeat a Champion

"If I had myself for a partner, I'd be unbeatable," proclaimed Mr. Champion, modestly. Nobody paid any attention to this routine remark from the great man.

He was referring to the fact that he had made a fine defensive play but Mr. Muzzy had loused it up and let Mr. Dale make his contract.

This hand illustrates the wisdom of playing your best, even with an apparently hopeless hand. When Mr. Muzzy opened the king of spades, many players would carelessly play the deuce from the East hand. After all, why should you encourage the continuation of the suit? You have no high honor in it and you can't ruff the third round.

SCREAMS SIGNAL
But Mr. Champion's thinking went a little farther than that. He saw a way to make his king of diamonds—if Mr. Muzzy would cooperate. This card

Would seem to be marked for sudden death since Mr. Dale had bid diamonds so strongly. In other words, Mr. Dale could no doubt enter dummy with either a heart or a club and pull the 10 of diamonds through. It sounds simple—but what if it could be arranged for Mr. Dale to have only one trump on the board? Then he could finesse once against the king of diamonds—and Mr. Champion would still have the king amply guarded.

With this plan in mind, Mr. Champion screamed for continuation of spades by playing his eight spot on the first trick. Mr. Muzzy cashed the ace. Now if he had followed with his third high spade, Mr. Dale would have been forced to ruff on the board or accept immediate defeat. After that Mr. Champion's king of diamonds would have been a sure winner.

SHIFTS TO HEARTS
But no. Mr. Muzzy had other ideas. At trick three he shifted to a heart—and Mr. Dale took the balance of the tricks. Mr. Champion was beside himself. "Why didn't you lead a third spade?" he bellowed. "Didn't you see my eight spot?" "What eight spot?" mumbled Mr. Muzzy, confusedly. It was here that Mr. Champion wished he could have himself for a partner.
