The Little Man's Dollar

VIE ARE going to hear plenty in the forth-W coming election campaign about the millions of dollars that are being poured into British Coumbia by big industry. Every British Columbian is proud and appreciative of our growth. Certainly Prince Rupert has good reason to be happy about the advent of industry on a large scale which has prought us the era of economic prosperity which we had anticipated so long and about which so many despaired and gave up. There is certainly no desire to minimize the great benefit which big industry has brought during the past few years to this whole area and is continuing to bring in everincreasing measure with a prosperity, the opportunities of which, indeed, many find it hard to avail themselves of to the fullest degree.

The average working man, labor and white collar, is glad of the prospects of future prosperity providing he is able to get in on it. He's glad to join in the welcome to new industry although he is also watching to see that the concessions are not made too generous.

The Richmond-Marpole Times has some timely remarks to make along these lines. It says:

The ordinary man knows the giants of industry can look after their dollar and that government will give it better than adequate protection. His attitude now is "What about my dollar?"

The leaders of the old line parties should get their ear to the ground. That rumbling noise is not applause. It is the worry of the little man about the value of his own hardearned dollar; his investment by way of taxes in his own well-being and that of his family

He is happy about the principle of hospital insurance but he wants it administered with reason and logic. He wants the myriad of services for which he pays government to be conducted with due regard for economy.

The man on the street, on the farm, in the store and in the plants will not be persuaded by any platform of immediate and sweeping nationalization. That would lead to chaos in our labor and economic picture and he knows it. But the little man is concerned about his own dollar. hard-earned and subject to high taxation and living costs Premier Johnson and the others should let the voter hear the assurance that his dollar is getting just as immediate attention, care, guardianship and affection as those of industry.

Crime and Publicity

THUGS and jailbirds are getting plenty of publicity these days. Even misguided juvenile delinquents obtain their share of it. Punk criminals are getting their names and pictures spread all over the front pages. Some of them even get follow-up stories, telling about the soft side of their lives, giving the alibis which led to their iniquitous careers. Of course, some of them never did much wrong except rob a bank or two anyway.

There is a type of thug who likes the limelight and doesn't mind how he gets publicity—as long as he gets it. To be played up in the news, to get into the limelight, thrills him immensely. Evidently, he believes that he is envied by many of his own kind of lawbreaker.

Too often thugs are made to look like the heroes of the piece instead of enemies of society which

Bacon for Britain

IT IS an old saying that it's an ill wind that blows nobody any good. this pork at cut rates or even this matter. give it away to foreigners.

Surely this surplus gives us the chance to help Britain through her own deep economic crisis. If we have to sell the pork surplus below cost, why not to Britain?

Better still, why not GIVE the whole works to the people of Britain, absolutely free?

IT WOULD cost Canada som Britain. But the out-or-pocket cost would be mere "chicken reea" compared with the hundreds of millions we are tossing around for defense-necessary as defense is.

But I think the return we would get from such a gift would be worth more than the money outlay. The British bacon ration per week or even month did ship it over. But everybody by the report: could get something. I think such a shipment would do more construction; than ten thousand speeches by politicians to show the British people that the Commonwealth scow grid and loading platform; idea really means something AFTER wars are over as well as while we are shooting Germans, etc.

If the Russians are really in earnest about the new policy which they proclaimed at the recent trade conference in Moscow, Canada could eventually lose more and more chunks of the British market. For the Russians have offered to what we should have offered to do long ago-that is, accept payment for what we sell to Britain in British pounds ster- be in excellent health and spirits

That would not mean that the B.C. lumbermen fish packers or fruit people would get paid in sterling. Our government would be responsible for paying the Canadian producers in ordinary Canadian money. But the equivalent amount would be credited to Canada's account in British pounds sterling.
