Canadian Oarsmen To Use B.C. Craft At Olympic Games

KELOWNA — Canada's oarsmen at the Olympic Games in July will have racing shells that can be termed an all-Canadian product.

They are being built at the Kelowna plant of 29-year-old former Navy Pilot Gordon Jennens, who in four years has become internationally famous for his racing craft.

He is Canada's only builder of racing shells, a craft long dominated by the traditional builders in England.

Four of Jennens's shells are on order for Canada's Olympic crews who will seek new laurels at the games in Helsinki, Finland.

ORDERED BY C.A.A.O.

The craft, ordered by the Canadian Association of Amateur Oarsmen, are a single, 26-foot, 27 pound shell; a double, 33-foot, 54 pounds; a four, 40-foot, 11 pounds, and an eight, 60-foot, 250 pounds.

Top Canadian oarsmen, already know the value of Jennen-built shells. Toronto's famous Argonauts Rowing Club has them, reeing nine of them now, and the University of British Columbia's crews split the waters of Burrard Inlet in Jen-craft. They have won 12 major cups since 1948, and many American clubs use the Kelowna-made shells.

Jennens's workshop is a converted wartime housing unit on the shores of Okanagan Lake. He moulds his own plywood, tans the leather used in the shoes and in the oarlocks. Only the oarlocks themselves are imported—from England. In the frame alone there the 1,200 individual pieces of wood. The wide variety used includes aircraft spruce grown in British Columbia, western red cedar, American oak, Philippine mahogany, Australian iron wood, cyprus and yellow cedar. In the finished shell there are 4,000 tiny copper nails.

WARTIME AIRMAN

Kelowna-born, Jennens, before he became a boat builder, knew all about "stress and strain." He was trained at an aero-industries technical school in Los Angeles in the early 40's. Then he became a flight engineer with the RCAF, and before the war ended he was attached to the fleet arm of the Royal Navy. He piloted Wildcats.

After the war he returned to his Kelowna home with an English bride and started to repair launches for sailing fans on Okanagan Lake.

In 1948 the Kelowna Aquatic Club gave him the job of repairing their shells and soon he was building his own, making a fast switch from aero to water dynamics.

Now he has more orders than he can handle. And, he commands top prices. For an eight the price complete is $1,600.

In his workshop he employs eight full-time artisans, whom

Russia Will Enter Olympics

HELSINKI, Finland (CP)—Russia Tuesday announced it would participate in the summer Olympics here, thus bringing to a close months of speculation on whether the Soviets would send teams.

Only sport Russians will not participate in is field hockey, a women's sport.

This will be the first time modern Russia has taken part in the international games. Before the revolution, czarist Russia entered teams with indifferent success.
