BLACKWOOD on Bridge

By EASLEY BLACKWOOD

Sometimes Overbidding May Help To Make the Contract

Nothing irritates a player like Mr. Champion more than a player like Miss Brash. She often overbids fantastically. But she's lucky. And she has what it takes to redouble a close contract—and to make it, if it's makeable.

It kills Mr. Champion when a bad bid goes unpunished. Today's hand was just about the last straw. Mr. Champion considered his holding too strong to open with one no trump. He decided to open one diamond and then to take powerful action over any response his partner made.

His partner made no response at all. But Miss Brash kept things going with a two-spade bid. Mr. Champion merely passed, not wanting to discourage the ladies from getting too high. When they reached four spades, he figured the time had come. He doubled and was delighted to hear Miss Brash redouble.

The opening lead was the king of diamonds and dummy's ace won. Before you read how Miss Brash played the hand, do you see how she kept from losing two spades, a heart and a club?

She did, and there were no errors by the defense. At trick two she led a diamond and ruffed it. Next came a small heart toward the queen. Mr. Champion won and made as good a return as any—the six of hearts. This was ruffed on the board and another diamond led and ruffed.

The king of clubs was played and Mr. Champion won and led back a club, won by dummy's queen. A third low diamond was ruffed in the closed hand. The king of hearts was now ruffed on the board and a third round of clubs ruffed in the closed hand.

At this point everybody was down to three cards. Mr. Champion had S—K Q 2, Miss Brash had S—A J 7, and dummy had the lone ten of spades, a diamond and a club.

Miss Brash simply led the seven of spades and Mr. Champion was fixed. If he played the deuce, dummy's ten would win and the ace of spades would take the tenth trick for declarer. He went in with the queen—but then had to lead from his king, deuce into Miss Brash's ace, jack.

German Immigrants By-Pass U.S.A. For Commonwealth

By JACK HENRY

FRANKFURT, Germany (Reuters)—Hundreds of thousands of Germans who once wanted to emigrate to the United States now are looking to Australia, Canada, South Africa and Argentina instead.

But with improved economic conditions in West Germany the desire to emigrate also has decreased.

A U.S. emigration official says that about 80 per cent of the more than 200,000 Germans who have registered for emigration to the United States have not applied for their visas.

During the great "emigration rush" of 1948, many Germans regarded the U.S. as the most desirable haven to which to escape from povertystricken postwar Germany. Since then, they say, much of the "glamor" of the United States has worn thin.

Altogether 32,000 Germans emigrated to Canada in 1951 and German interest in finding new homes in the Commonwealth countries is increasing because of assisted emigration plans and belief that these territories still offer great opportunities for economic development.

CHECK CONDITIONS

A West German delegation is due to arrive in Australia soon to investigate on-the-spot living conditions of German emigrants. On its report will depend whether the West German government accepts an Australian offer to allow about 12,000 German immigrants into the country in the next 12 months.

About 8000 Germans have emigrated to Australia since 1945. All either financed themselves or were financed by their future employers.

Last year the Australian government recruited about 1000 Germans to work on the railways. They received six months' free training before starting work. The only stipulation was that they had to be bachelors between the ages of 18 and 45.

Emigrants to South Africa are at present leaving at the rate of between 1000 and 2000 a year. German interest in Africa is high because of past associations with pre-First World War German colonies there and the large German community in South-West Africa.

The Germans have been told that South Africa needs 10,000 skilled workers from western Europe, including Germany, immediately and possibly another 12,000 to 15,000 in the next three years.

Several hundred Germans have also emigrated to New Zealand and India since the war.
