

World Health Director, Chisholm Retiring

DELAIDE KERR
NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — Dr. Brock Chisholm, world health director with the biggest salary in the world, two billion dollars going to retire.

Dr. Brock Chisholm, 57, as director-general of the world health organization, is retiring after a five-year stint as man's first round-the-world against disease. It's the first time he's brought him the title, "First doctor to the world."

Chisholm's work has affected many of whom never heard of him. In fact, he would have been more of an unknown name for a couple of years ago. He had only one to take a Santa Claus. In the meantime, he was swinging on the whole world, declaring that a year is society's moral concept of right and wrong.

He was delivered while he was a Canadian deputy minister and brought a flood of protests.

Applewhite Says Liberals Kept Pledges

Special to The Daily News
FRANCOIS LAKE. — Speaking at Burns Lake, Ted Applewhite, Skeena Liberal candidate for MP, rapped no other parties, made no promises, based his plea for reelection on the record of performance by the Liberal party.

The national slogan four years ago was unity, security, freedom and the Liberal government had lived up to this slogan, Mr. Applewhite declared.

He said national unity was greater than ever, 48 per cent of taxes went for national security, personal freedoms had been preserved throughout the world for economic and political soundness.

On local farming, Mr. Applewhite said the Aluminum Company of Canada had provided an immense and growing market. If the area did not produce market requirements they would be bought elsewhere. Much more meat and vegetables could and should be produced here.

The British market is not lost to Canadian farmers but why compel producers to sell in the British market when they can get more elsewhere, he asked.

The Liberals had removed the means test on old age pensions, Mr. Applewhite said. Unkind light on human nature reveals that those who branded the means test iniquitous now criticize because persons in high income brackets receive universal pension. Income tax takes care of that, Mr. Applewhite explained.

The national health program had cost the government $165,000,000 in five years. Disabled Veterans Act, hospital assistance, pre-natal and infant care, diagnostic facilities had all improved and been greatly expanded under the Liberals.

"There will be a national health scheme," Applewhite declared, "and it will come from the Liberal government but it will not be brought into effect until sound."

British Columbia is a good example of enforcing a scheme before it can be made politically and economically sound.

"The Liberals will not be forced or hounded into a national scheme until it can be soundly based, but it is inevitably coming."

Collecting taxes from the people is not fun for any government, Mr. Applewhite said.

"The opposition in Ottawa has loyally supported us in our successful defence measures.

"We've done a good job, but, like washing dishes, it must be done over and over. We can't quit. The big fellow may strike tomorrow or never, but we can't let down for an instant."

In closing, Mr. Applewhite said, "We make no promises for things we cannot do. The one thing I can promise is a continuation of the type of service given in the last four years."

HE'S FOR THE BIRDS—Spying an old friend, pigeons in the Tulleries Gardens in Paris flutter to the arms of Pierre Garnier, 75, whose hobby for years has been feeding the gentle birds. On sunny days the pigeons seem to expect his arrival, and Garnier always shows up on schedule.

Three English Girls Heading West by Bike

CALGARY. — Three girls from Birmingham, England, were sympathetic to cowpokes who endured the jolting heaves of unsaddled broncs at the Calgary Stampede.

After being guests of Mayor Don MacKay at the world-famous rodeo, it was time for the three to start enduring some jolts and shakes of their own. They resumed their cross-country motorcycle tour that will eventually take them to Vancouver.

The three young "brunns," as they call themselves, are 23-year-old dancing instructor Violet Riley, 22-year-old laboratory technician Joan Poole and 20-year-old dressmaker Deryl Checkley.

After disembarking from the liner Georgic at Halifax last Nov. 2, the girls made their way to Toronto despite a "dreadfully cold" Canadian winter.

After a two-month rest-up, they pointed their machines towards Windsor, then made a swing through Michigan before finally arriving in Winnipeg. Funds were boosted in a five-week working stop-over, then they made their way across Saskatchewan to Lethbridge, and up to Calgary.

All three girls logged a good many touring miles before arriving in Canada, and their plans call for many more before they finally arrive home. Each of them spent two years travelling in Europe by "hostelling."

Once in Vancouver, the girls hope to work their way across the Pacific to Australia where they'll board their motorcycles once again.

United Church Opens School In Dramatics

PARIS, Ont. — The United Church of Canada has opened its 10-day school in religious drama at nearby Five Oaks camp.

Lay members from each of the church's five eastern conferences are attending and the instructions they received before setting out were to bring with them a Bible, a copy of Shakespeare and any biblical costume they happened to have or any striped or plain material suitable for wrapping around an apostle or shepherd.

The aspiring actors and directors attend lectures given by some of the best drama directors in Canada. They include Blanche Hoeg of the London Little Theatre, Warren Nelson of the Hamilton Players' Guild, Patricia Frank of Toronto and Donald Hannon, well-known actor now playing in the Shakespeare festival at Stratford.

Each day there is a Bible session and emphasis is placed on the "resources, used and evaluation of drama in the church."

The students receive instruction in pageantry, costuming, make-up rehearsals and the setting up of scenery. They will attend a performance of "Richard III" at Stratford and each will give his opinion at a discussion.

Isobel Squires is the director of the workshop. Sports and swimming are included in each day's activities.

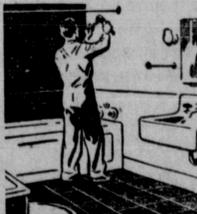

The workshop's aim is to apply all its efforts to the religious field.

Canadians Making Film For Disney

BANFF, Alta. — The birds and animals in the Canadian Rockies are having their pictures taken for Hollywood's Walt Disney.

Dick Bird and his wife Ada, Canadian photographer-lecturer team, are making a series of colored movies of the habitat and habits of the birds and animals of the high mountain places.

Last year the couple made a movie of the pika or rock rabbit, a "cute" little animal which lives around rock slides. The movie aroused Disney's interest.

Now the Birds are taking pictures for the famous cartoonist. They think Disney will use the films to make one of his popular movies on live animals.

CHIEF SUBJECTS

Their chief subjects are woodpeckers, owls, ducks, moose, elk, sheep and goats. It's not only a matter of photographing the birds or animals on the mountain slopes or on a tree, but of trying to get a little of the daily life of each.

Movie making is nothing new to Dick Bird who has operated a photography business in Regina for years. He has worked as a cameraman and assistant director for such American concerns as Universal, Biograph, Mutual, Selig, Thanhouser and Essanay, for overseas studios such as Gaumont and Pathe, and for Hearst, Fox and Pathe newsreels.

He's shot newsreels of Pancho Villa in Mexico, horrors of famine in China, bombing of Madrid, and the Canadian tours of the Duke of Windsor when he was Prince of Wales.

He took pictures on his own in British Guinea which he used in his lectures. While working with a German zoological expedition in South America, he ran up against one of the occupational hazards in that area when he was bitten by a snake.

MOUNTAIN TRAVELOGUE

Bird's first films in the Rockies were taken in 1910 when, with the co-operation of the Canadian Pacific Railway, he made a mountain travelogue.

"The CPR put a flat car in front of a locomotive, and while the train shuttled up and down the line, he ground away on an old-fashioned hand-cranked camera.

Bird became famous for his thrilling pictures of a pin-point of light growing bigger and bigger as the train approached the end of the tunnel.

The name Africa was first given by the Romans to their provinces in the north of the continent.

PPCLI SWEETHEART — Soldiers of the 3rd Battalion, PPCLI, in Korea have bypassed the usual Hollywood glamor girls to pick 19-year-old Rose Marie Stumpf of Olds, Alta., as the sweetheart of their battalion. A dozen pictures of the pretty Canadian girl decorate the walls of PPCLI bunkers. When mail call rolls round the troops line up and receive letters from their "girl."

Pulp Experts To Survey New Zealand

MONTREAL. — Several Canadian technical advisers on pulp and paper will leave soon for New Zealand to help in development of that country's pulp and paper industry. E. B. Corbett, New Zealand minister of lands, forests and Maori affairs, said Friday night in an interview.

Development of the industry is expected to produce New Zealand's domestic needs as well as an export quota of paper for Australia, Mr. Corbett said.

Mr. Corbett has already visited Washington, New York and Ottawa in connection with the plan. He is accompanied by W. Sullivan, minister of labor, mines and immigration.

They will leave today for British Columbia to study lumber operations there.

Law Captures Burglar Queen

SEATTLE (AP) — The teen-aged "queen" of a burglar ring, described by her companions as sometimes ordering them to steal an automobile only to reject it if it was the wrong color, fell into the hands of the law Friday.

The girl, 16, and three boys, 15, 16 and 17, were caught by a Snohomish County deputy sheriff.

They confessed stealing 11 automobiles and prowling 29 summer homes.

At one time the girl filled out a stolen payroll check for $92 and directed one of the boys to cash it at an Aberdeen bank, the sheriff said. She also directed them to keep stealing automobiles until she got one the right color, he said.

Woman Starts 29th Year U.S. House

WASHINGTON (AP) — Edith Rogers, whose trademark is on her shoulder, has started her 29th consecutive year in the United States House of Representatives. This is believed to be a record for woman lawgivers.

Five men have served consecutively in the Massachusetts House.

First woman sent to Congress New England state, Rogers has bettered the Virginia-born Lady Ashmun who served 25 years in Parliament when she died in 1944.

Rogers got into politics through her husband, John Jacob Lowell, Mass., died in his sixth Congress. She was elected to fill his unexpired term. She is 44 then, and at the time she planned to be in office only a few years. But now if she intends to stay in and she says "of course."

vacacious, chatty and very lively in her liking for perky and pretty clothes, Mrs. Rogers on occasion has been a bit of a troublemaker. Back in 1940, when members wanted to adjourn despite war clouds, she produced a resolution calling on Congress to stay in session.

Later she sponsored a resolution to turn the clocks an hour ahead so there would be daylight for war production.
