

Sitting Mayors Hold Edge in Ontario

TORONTO (CP)—Sitting mayors held the edge in municipal elections in Ontario cities Monday for a third term in Toronto, the province's largest city.

Allan J. Rush, a former detective who first entered municipal politics to protest his dismissal from the police force, won a fourth term in London. His previous terms were for one year. The new term is for two years. Sault Ste. Marie re-elected Herbert Smale, a locomotive engineer, who turned back Peter King, a former alderman.

At Sudbury, Dan Jessup went back for a third term. He defeated W. S. Beaton, mayor for 1 year before he was defeated two years ago.

Belleville elected 52-year-old Jack Both, who enters the city council for the first time. He won over Charles L. Hyde, a city alderman for 16 years.

Harry Worton, 32, won his third consecutive term at Guelph over James P. Heffernan, who ran for the post after six years as an alderman.

Peterborough's Mayor Hugh Laddell went down to defeat after two terms in office, beaten by Norman Graham, who was twice elected a city alderman but didn't complete either term. He resigned once over operation of the city garbage collection system. His second resignation came in October to prepare for the mayoralty contest.

School Boards Must Submit Referendums, Not Bylaws

VICTORIA (CP)—School boards throughout British Columbia are being required to arrange for referendums rather than by-law votes when their building programs extend over a long period.

This was disclosed today by H. L. Campbell, deputy minister of education, when asked why a proposed $3,385,700 bylaw of the Greater Victoria School Board is to be submitted as referendum instead of a straight bylaw.

J. V. Fisher, deputy minister of finance, who handles the merchandizing of school board debentures, explained the two chief reasons:

First a by-law was restrictive

inasmuch as it has to specify the date debentures would be issued; being required to show the exact rate of interest, and had to show the amount of payment and carrying of the debt.

"One simply can't say what the interest rate will be next fall or the year afterward," Mr. Fisher said. "And any bond which doesn't confer with the market rate is likely to suffer."

The second reason was when long-range building programs are involved, it meant keeping money idle to borrow before it is actually needed.

If voters approved a by-law he explained, all the money would have to be borrowed within a specified period.

On the other hand, if voters approve of floating a loan through a referendum, the school board is free to borrow as much as the money is needed. He said the referendum set the limit of the school board's borrowing power so that control was still in the hands of the property owners.

Commission To Probe Logger Strike

VICTORIA (CP)—A one-man industrial inquiry commission which will have power to inquire into all matters pertaining to the strike of 6,000 interior lumbermen, has been appointed by the government.

The government today announced the appointment of county court Judge Arthur H. Lord of Vancouver. The move followed four unsuccessful talks between company, union and government leaders and the rejection of a mediation plan of Premier Bennett's.

Judge Lord will have power to make recommendations for settlement of the strike to the government.

Members of the International Woodworkers of America CCL have been on strike in the northern interior for 10 weeks and in southern interior for about four weeks. They are demanding higher wages.

Storms Rage In Adelaide

At Leigh Creek, South Australia, a gale with gusts of up to 92 miles an hour demolished a new prefabricated church which was to have been opened in a week.

A squall which struck an airliner soon after take-off Sunday night hurried passengers to the floor amid a pile of baggage and crockery before they could fasten their safety-belts. One woman was injured.

In New Norfolk, Tasmania, a gust hurled a bandsman's bass drum into the air and bounced it over the bandmaster's head. The bandsman retrieved it and continued playing.

BLACKWOOD on BRIDGE

Abel Lost Chance To Set Hand On Diamond Return

As Mr. Champion pointed out recently, Mr. Muzzy is weak only on bidding, dummy play and defense. Of course, Mr. Muzzy plays so much bridge that by the law of averages he is bound to get a good result now and then. And he might get credit for a good bid or a good play if he would only refrain from making any comment after the hand.

Take today's hand for example. He and Miss Brash bid like mad to reach a contract of six hearts. As you see, the defenders held all four kings, a queen and two jacks. I'll leave it up to you to decide whether Mr. Muzzy deserves any credit for the very fine result on the hand.

Mr. Champion opened the jack of diamonds, dummy ducked and Mr. Abel won with the king and made the rather pointless return of another diamond.

Mr. Muzzy won with the queen. He laid down the jack of hearts and let it ride when Mr. Champion did not cover. Next he led a small heart to dummy's ace. Mr. Abel discarding a club.

He now cashed the ace of diamonds on which he pitched a club. This was followed with

In dummy were the queen of spades and the ace and jack of clubs. If Mr. Champion discarded his spade, dummy's queen would be good. If he played a club, both of dummy's clubs would win.

His actual discard was the king of spades and Miss Brash had a few agonizing moments as Mr. Muzzy puzzled over what to discard from the board. Finally he played the jack of clubs then led a club to win the last two tricks in dummy.

Mr. Muzzy had executed a Vienna coup and a beautiful squeeze. But he felt called upon to make a comment. "I knew it was hopeless partner," he said, "so all I could do was to run my hearts and hope somebody made a mistake. Champion's play of the king of spades proves that even the best make the wrong discard sometimes."
