B.C. Lumber Firms Seek New Markets

Special to The Daily News

VANCOUVER — A cargo of western red cedar and yellow cedar, a gift from the B.C. Lumber Manufacturers Association, has just arrived in Britain and will shortly be turned into a sample hutment dwelling for services personnel.

The shipment consisted of merchantable No. 1 red cedar in the amount of 6,897 board feet, and yellow cedar in the amount of 1,158 board feet, the B.C. Lumber Manufacturers Association announced.

The U.K. Timber Development Association will supervise the construction of the hutment and it is the hope of B.C. cedar-producing firms that the use of this all- cedar type hutment will provide a new market.

The hut will have a 16-foot clear span and will be 32 feet long. There will be a clear height of 6 feet 9 inches from the floor to the underside of the roof beams, while the height of the eaves will be 8 feet. The floors will be made of panels of 3x8 inch red cedar planks, tongued and grooved. The sides and gable walls will be formed of vertical 2-inch by 8-inch cedar planks, also tongued and grooved, and fitted together with rails at the top and bottom. Each gable will have a door and each wall a window.

While this is still in the experimental stage, officials in the United Kingdom, and suppliers of cedar products here, are optimistic regarding the future of this new style hutment, which they claim can be prefabricated and will be particularly useful in billeting overseas forces in Britain and Germany.

—Foot Lights—

Lilian Miller
Prince Rupert Little Theatre having fully recovered from both the latest production and the festive season, is now ready for action on the play "Strange Road," which will be produced in the 1953 Drama Festival.

Cast for this new play has not yet been chosen. This means there is an opportunity for anyone interested in drama and not yet a member of the group, to come to the meetings and try out for the play.

A serious play takes—serious acting and, even more of a challenge, takes a great deal of initiative and imagination to create correct staging, lighting, and sound effects. This play is a real experimental ground for these arts.

Little Theatre meets again on Monday at 8:00 p.m. in the Civic Centre.

One in Twelve

One person in every 12 in the United States is 65 years of age or over, according to the latest statistics in the New York Journal of Commerce. In 1930, before Federal Social Security legislation was enacted, the rate was one in 19, and 50 years ago the proportion was one in 25. At present New Hampshire leads all the states, with 11.1 per cent of its population aged 65 or over. New Mexico is at the other end of the scale, with only 5.1 per cent in the aged category.

BLACKWOOD on Bridge

By EASLEY BLACKWOOD

Learning When To Pass Is a Problem to Mr. Abel

In learning when to pass, it is well to remember this fact: that the overall is only a distant relative of the opening bid. Mr. Abel was surprised and shocked when he took an 1100-point set at his three-diamond contract in today's deal. He made much of the fact that he had a good opening bid. And that was true. The trouble was, of course, that he was not the opening bidder.

Both opponents had shown strength by bidding. His partner had shown weakness by passing. What could Mr. Meek be expected to have? Just about what he actually showed up with—a couple of jacks.

Mr. Abel should have passed promptly. This decision lies in the answer to one simple question: What did he have to gain by entering the bidding? Surely it would be an absurdity to expect to make game at diamonds or no trumps on the North-South cards. If the opponents obligingly dropped out of the bidding and Mr. Meek turned up with a couple of key cards—say, the king of hearts and queen of diamonds—then three-odd at diamonds might be made. Sixty points. What kind of a gain is that, compared with a possible loss of 1100 points or more?

Another point in favor of passing was the fact that Mrs. Keen and Mr. Dale probably would have got too high if left to their own devices and Mr. Abel then would have enjoyed a plus score on the deal.

As actually played, Mrs. Keen opened her lone heart and Mr. Dale won with the king and returned the seven of spades. The queen lost to Mrs. Keen's ace and she led back the four of spades for her partner to ruff. Back came a low club and Mrs. Keen won with the king and led another spade. Mr. Dale ruffed again, cashed the queen of clubs, the ace of hearts and followed with another heart. Mr. Abel ruffed with the jack of diamonds, which held. But now he had to lose another trump trick to Mrs. Keen's 10.

Ken Watson's Curling

WHAT'S WRONG WITH YOUR BACKSWING?

The point on the ice from which your backswing commences is not always the same. Nor do I use the term "point" loosely. Although a curling stone is 10 to 11 inches wide, the line on which it must be aimed is an imaginary line from the skip's broom, (at which you are aiming) through the centre of the stone and extending to the top of the arc of the backswing. Therefore if your stone does not exactly split that imaginary line at the start of your backswing, the odds are that your swing will be off-line and you will be wide or narrow of the target.

Only when the skip holds his broom on the centre lines does your stone split the centre line in front of the back at the commencement of your swing. When the broom you are aiming at is to your left, off centre, then your stone must be adjusted to the left accordingly, and the further off centre the broom, the further to the left you start your rock. Mind you, your stone will always have some portion of it on the centre line because the angle deviation is very slight.

If you can, through practice, develop a true, unhurried and rhythmic swing without any pushes or last-minute twists of the handle, this one point, if observed carefully, will spare you many moments of mental agony. You will gain the confidence necessary to play wicks and rolls for position, instead of merely being satisfied to hit any part of a stone you are wanting to remove.

Not until after I had been curling for twenty years did I learn that this had been the reason why I was consistently a little narrow on in-turns and tended to be wide on out-turns, due to this little idiosyncrasy. To my mind, this one point is so important it is worth sleeping on tonight, and every night from now to the end of your curling days.

Tuesday... What's Wrong With Your Backswing? (Part 3)

Abacadabra was a magical word used by the ancients as a spell to overthrow evil spirits. The Upper Canada Bible Society was established at York, Toronto, in 1818.
