Player Can Guide Partner's Defense

THE CORRECT defense against many contracts is far from obvious. Often a contract can be defeated only by the lead of a specific card at a specific time. The unfortunate player who does not happen to hit upon this killing lead is usually subject to sharp criticism from across the table.
 This is not always an equitable arrangement. Often the unfortunate one is guilty only in what you might call a physical sense. That is, it is he alone who is in a position to place the thumb and fingers of one hand on a certain card, withdraw it from the other cards, and lay it face up on the table.
PARTNER IS CULPRIT
 But I have observed that on many occasions it is his partner who is the real culprit. He sits there spouting criticism in a pompous, self-righteous manner, completely overlooking the fact that with no trouble at all he could have guided the defense into the right channel.
 In today's deal it appeared to Mrs. Keen that the best defense against five spades was to lead her lone heart and try to win a trick later with her small trump. She planned to win the first lead of trumps, put Mr. Masters in with the ace of clubs and ruff a heart return.
WRONG SIGNAL
 Dummy's ace of hearts won the first trick. And now it was time for Mr. Masters to think. His side had bid diamonds and clubs and yet Mrs. Keen had chosen to open a heart. The only possible reason for this was that the deuce of hearts was a singleton.
 Mr. Masters realized what his partner's plan of defense was and he also realized with horror that she would undoubtedly try to put him in with the ace of clubs - which he didn't have. He had never helped diamonds and there was no reason for her to think he had the ace of that suit. How could he tell her to lead a diamond?
 He did the best he could by playing the 10 of hearts on the first trick. Obviously this was an unnecessarily high card and Mrs. Keen read it as a suit preference signal asking for the lead of the higher of the other two plain suits.

LONG HEARTS
 Mr. Champion led a trump to his queen at trick two and Mrs. Keen won and returned a diamond. Mr. Masters won and led back a heart which Mrs. Keen trumped. She then cashed the king of diamonds for the second undertrick. Note that if she had led a club at trick three Mr. Champion could have made six-odd, discarding both of dummy's diamonds on his long hearts.
