Good Neighbors

A NEIGHBORLY and helpful gesture is being made by the Prince Rupert Little Theatre in planning to turn over the proceeds of tomorrow's callies. showing of "See How They Run" to the Terrace Little Theatre.

When the Civic Centre in Terrace was burned to the ground several months ago, the village's theatrical group suffered an almost mortal blow. All its, props and other possessions were destroyed and so, of course, " as the stage that it used. The disaster meant that the winter's entire program had to be cancelled and there was no telling when another could be arranged.

But the Terrace Little Theatre refused to accept this as final. With the Prince Rupert Drama Festi-'val coming up, its members went into rehearsals for their two entries regardless of the makeshift conditions in which they had to work. They were "drawing-room" rehearsals but the description conveys little idea of the difficulties that were involved.

However, the Terrace group proved that it had talent as well as persistence, for one of its entries was a first-place winner at the Festival. It was a fine accomplishment and it is heartening to hear that this group intends to continue its good work. It is also gratifying to know that the Prince Rupert Little Theatre thinks so well of its colleagues along the line that it is making a real effort to help them carry on.

It is a gesture of goodwill, faith and friendship that does credit to all concerned.

Useful New Citizens

▲ DAPTALITY of Canada's postwar immigrants is Ellustrated by the case of Alex von Svoboda, currently painting a giant mural for the lobby of the new Molson's building in Toronto.

Born in Austria, Mr. von Svoboda came to Toronto in Feeduary, 1951, with $10 in capital. For his first month there, he lived on a sandwich a day: Finding little demand for his abilities as a sculptor and painter, he went to work with a construction gang. Now he has murals in several Canadian buildings, and has had five exhibitions of his art.

. Another instance is George Kokocinski. Bo n in Poland, later inmates of a forced labor camp. In Germany, Mr. and Mrs. Kokocinski came to Canada as domestic workers in 1949. Recently he received his degree in forestry from University of Toronto and now is employed with the research department of Ontario's Lands and Forests Department.
