

Boys Revive Falconry With Young Sparrow Hawks

HAMILTON, Ont. — Three schoolboys in nearby Burlington are reviving the ancient sport of falconry with three young sparrow hawks they captured soon after the birds hatched. Eley and Gary Davis and their friend, John Weir, caught their strange pets in June in a nest at the top of an elm tree overhanging a rocky crag. "When we first found the nest it had three eggs in it," said 15-year-old Gary. "We let them hatch and watched the birds develop for about four days. The boys removed two of the hawks without trouble, but when they returned for the snake, the boys' pets—two sev- eral days later the male birds and one male—have attained full size.

The boys wear gloves to protect themselves from the birds sharp talons.

The boys hope to keep the birds until next spring when the female birds hatch eggs of their own.

"They're like razors," they said. "You should see when we feed them a large piece of meat. They just rip it apart with their claws."

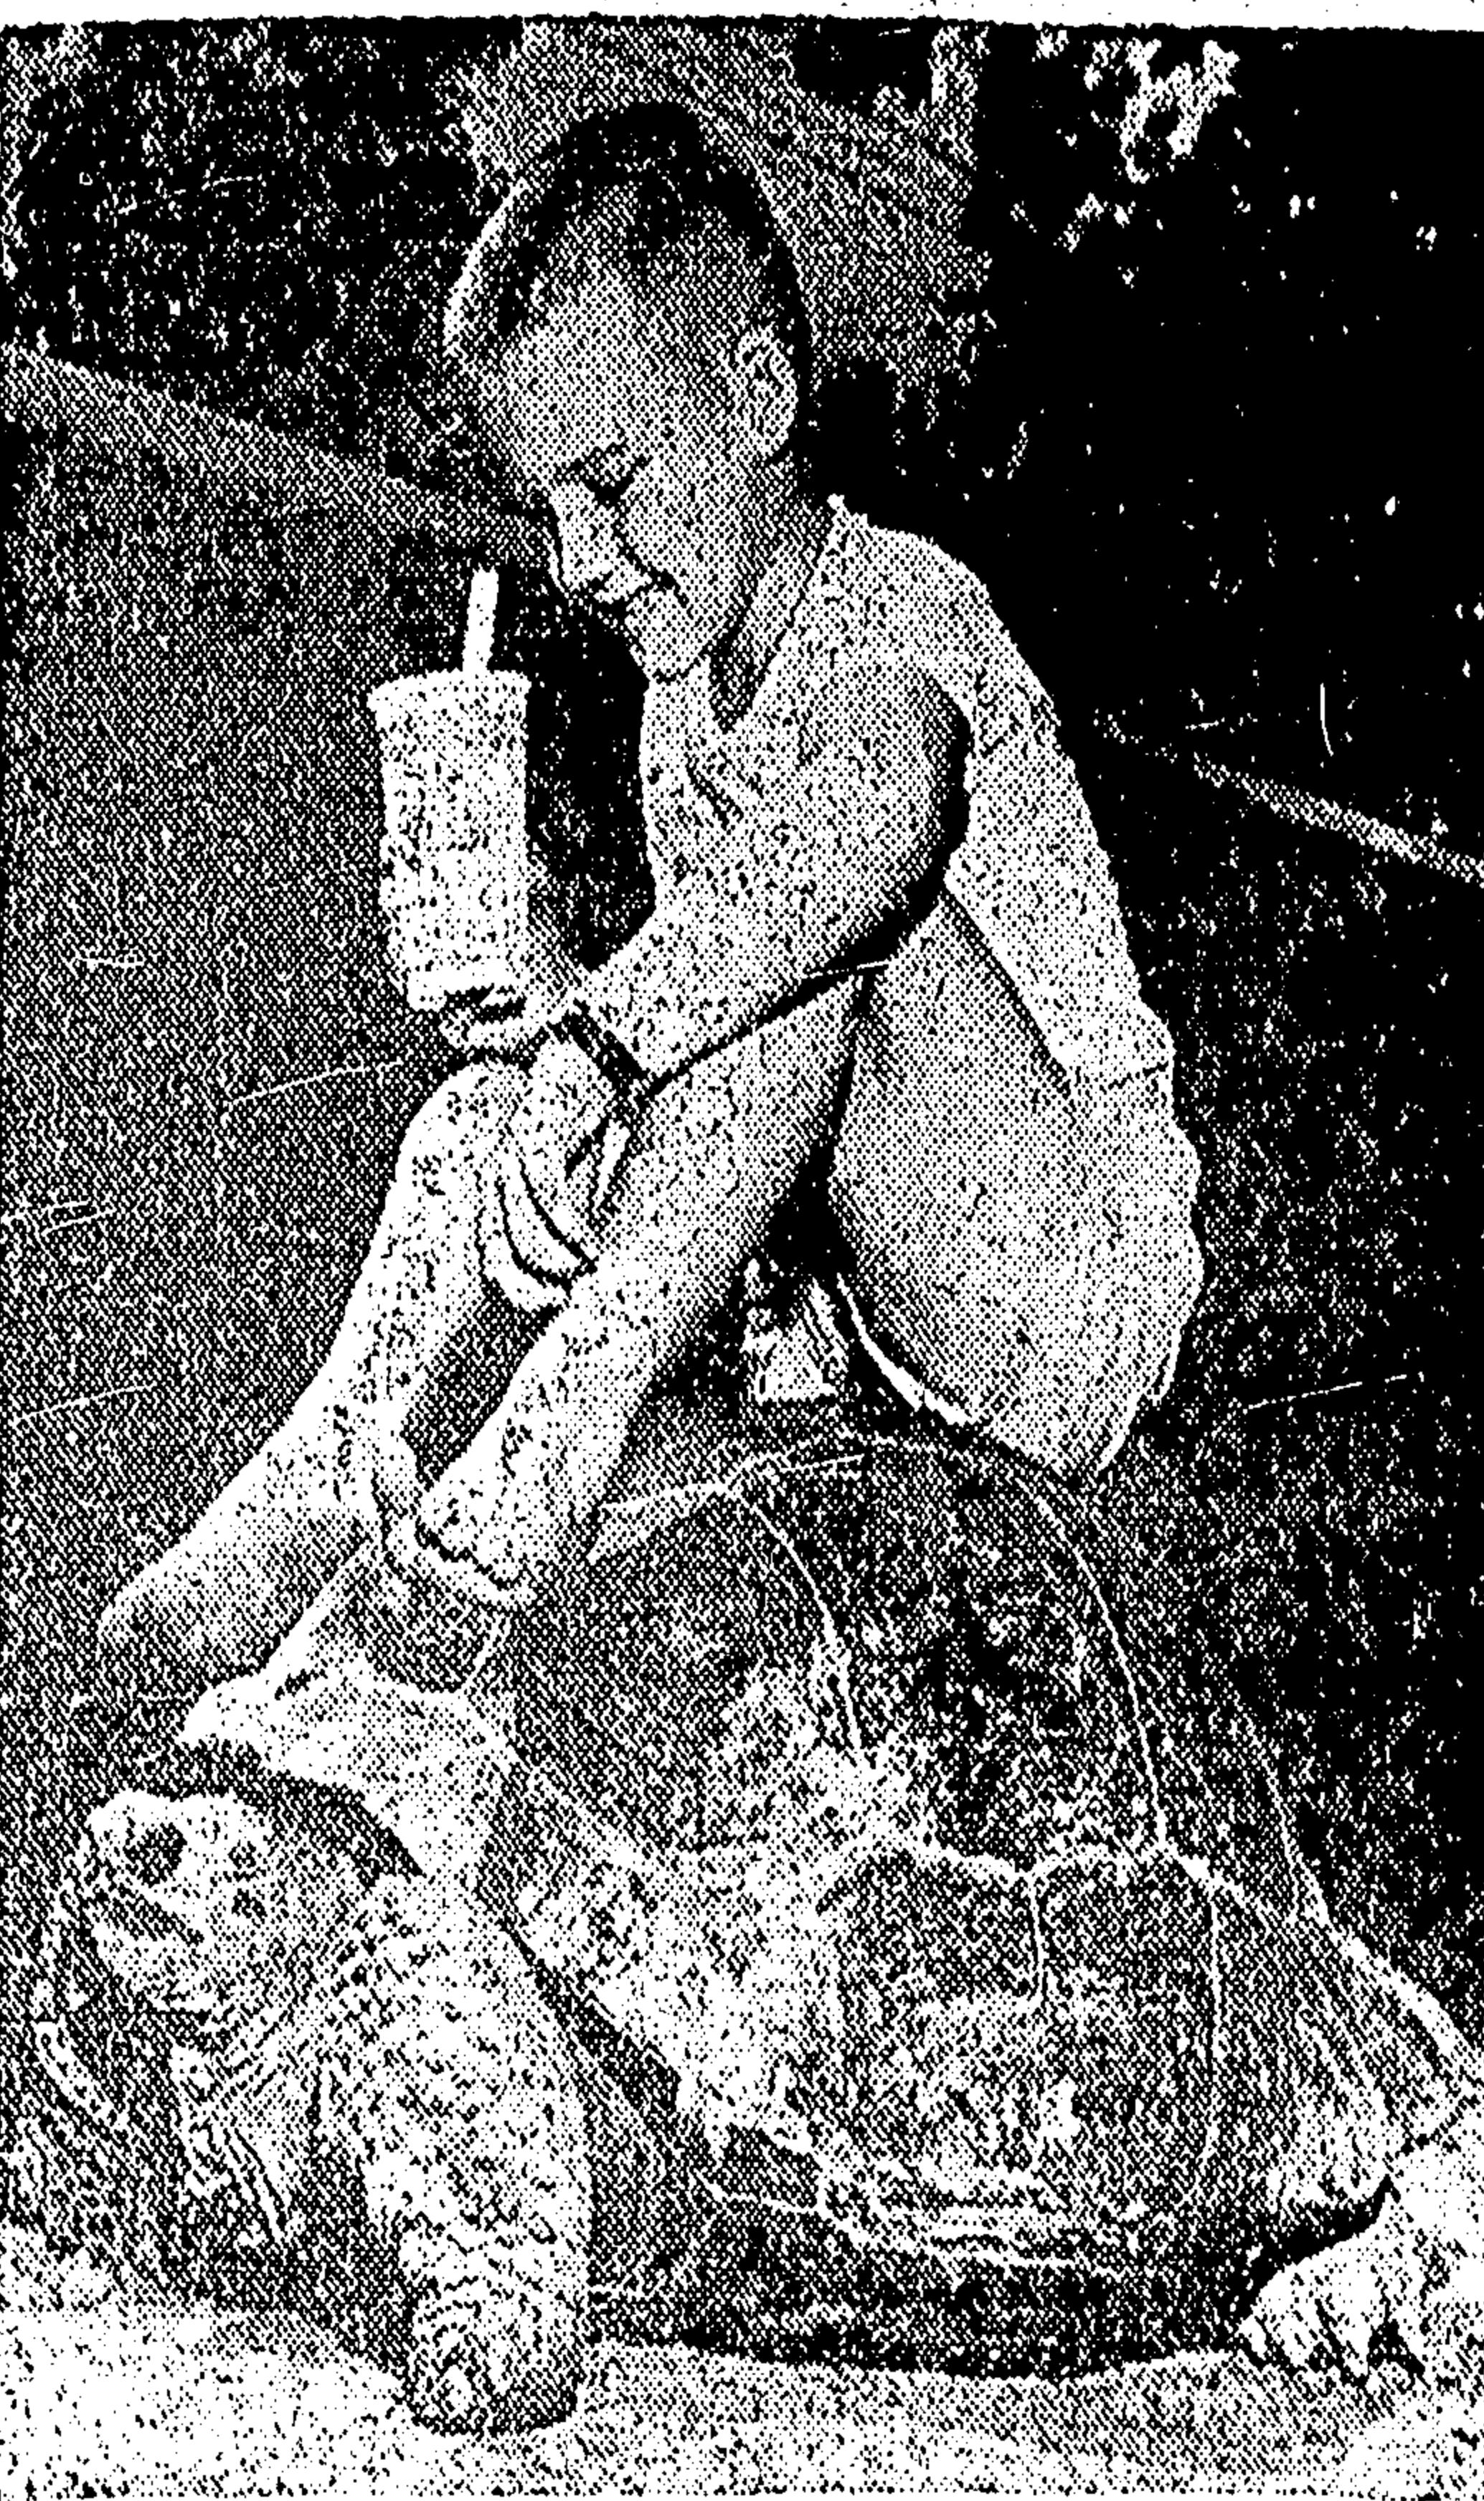

The birds have become tame enough to release for short periods.

"They always come back when they get hungry," said John

"We've even trained them to come when we whistle. We pu-

Muzzys And Champions Same The World Over

Proof that the Muzzys, Brashes and Champions of the game are the same the world over is contained in the following from Mr. E. H. East of Milford Haven, Wales:

"Dear Mr. Blackwood:
We, too, have our Mr. Muzzy and, like yours, the more our Mr. Champion bullies him, the worse he gets."

"However, with Muzzy in the game you never know. At trick two Dale led a diamond and Muzzy went right up with the ace. Doggedly following his partner's advice of leading off the top rather than the bottom, he returned the nine of spades. Champion's knave fell to Dale's queen. Dale now led the six of clubs, playing the king from dummy under Muzzy's ace."

POTENTIAL WINNER

"Muzzy's eight of spades was half-way to the table when it suddenly dawned on him that the seven in dummy was a potential winner. Across the table Champion's gimlet eye bored through him, while on his right Dale sat grinning like a Cheshire cat. Hoping for a miracle Muzzy withdrew the spade and led a small club."

"But Dale cleared the clubs and diamonds, led the deuce of spades and poor Muzzy had had it. After winning with the eight of spades he either had to give dummy a trick with the seven or lead a heart into Dale's ace-queen."

"Champion, naturally, started off right away, but he nearly had a fit when Dale, who loves to needle him, quietly interposed.

"I don't know that I should blame Muzzy too much, Champion," he said. "For n.o.w part I always regard four to the seven as a sure stopper."

"Playing recently, Muzzy led the troy of spades from Q J 10 3. This went right into declarer's A K 9, enabling him to make an otherwise hopeless contract. Champion, of course, raised the roof. 'How many times have I told you, Muzzy,' he yelled, 'that the correct play from such a holding is the queen?'

LATER HAND

"Two hands later, along came the deal shown above. With a look of grim determination Muzzy led the ten of spades. Champion's king, falling under Dale's ace. Looking things over, Dale didn't fancy his chances at all."

In 1955 the Canadian manufacturing industry realized 4.3 cents on each dollar of sales, compared to 4.6 cents in 1951.
