SOVIET FARM, FOOD STATUS
WORSE THAN IT WAS IN 1926

WASHINGTON (UPI)
The United States Information
Agency reported Sunday Russia's massive drive to step up farm output has failed so badly that the population has less grain per person than in 1926.

At the same time, it said livestock production has fallen off to the point where cows number 20,000,000 — about 3,000,000
fewer than before the Bolshevik revolution of 1917.

"After more than a quarter-century of collective farming
under Communism," said the agency, "the Russian people are still critically short of foodstuffs."

The USSR operates the government's Voice of America network and its comments on the Russian food situation were drafted for overseas use.

"The more rigidly the Communist regimes have imposed collectivization, the more sharply both food and consumer goods production have dropped," the agency added.

It is expected to be
