Mr. Dale is Helped to Exceed Contract

Looking at Mr. Dale's jump to four spades toda you might think that he had miscounted his hand if he was under the impression his partner had in him a double raise, or that he had lost his mind, his of these things was true. Sorth dealer, East ...

He based his aggressive action on the following considerations, He had a good, playable trump | suit, supported by partner. He had second-round control of the two unibld sults and his longest side suit, diamonds, was under the protection of his partner's opening bid. Those were the technical considerations. But the most important point of all was that the! hand would be defended by Mr. Muzzy and Mr. New and therefore there was a good chance he! would have a trick or two "donated" to his cause.
