It may be small. It may lack much in the way of expensive equipment. But to families scattered over Canada's thinly populated areas it becomes "the finest hospital in the world". For it is their one assurance that medical aid will be within reach when needed, even though the nearest doctor may be a hundred miles

Babies are born, the sick nursed, accident victims treated and children's health clinics conducted in these Outpost Hospitals. And from them, Red Cross nurses travel over primitive trails on countless errands of mercy.
