

U.S. Nursing Hopes For New Peace Plan

By GEORGE KITCHEN
Canadian Press Staff Writer
WASHINGTON — The United States government is nursing a genuine hope that the Big Four meeting in Switzerland next month might produce some new formula for solving some of the problems between East and West.

That is the extent of the administration's expectations. As President Eisenhower and other key government figures have indicated, no dramatic, overnight solution is looked for to the frictions that have beset the world since the cold war began nearly 10 years ago.

Rather, it leans to the possibility that the three-day meeting might produce some new approach by which international tensions might be eased. While no senior official would hazard a guess as to how long that easing process might take, it is known that government thinking is in terms of 10 years or so.

BASIC PROBLEMS

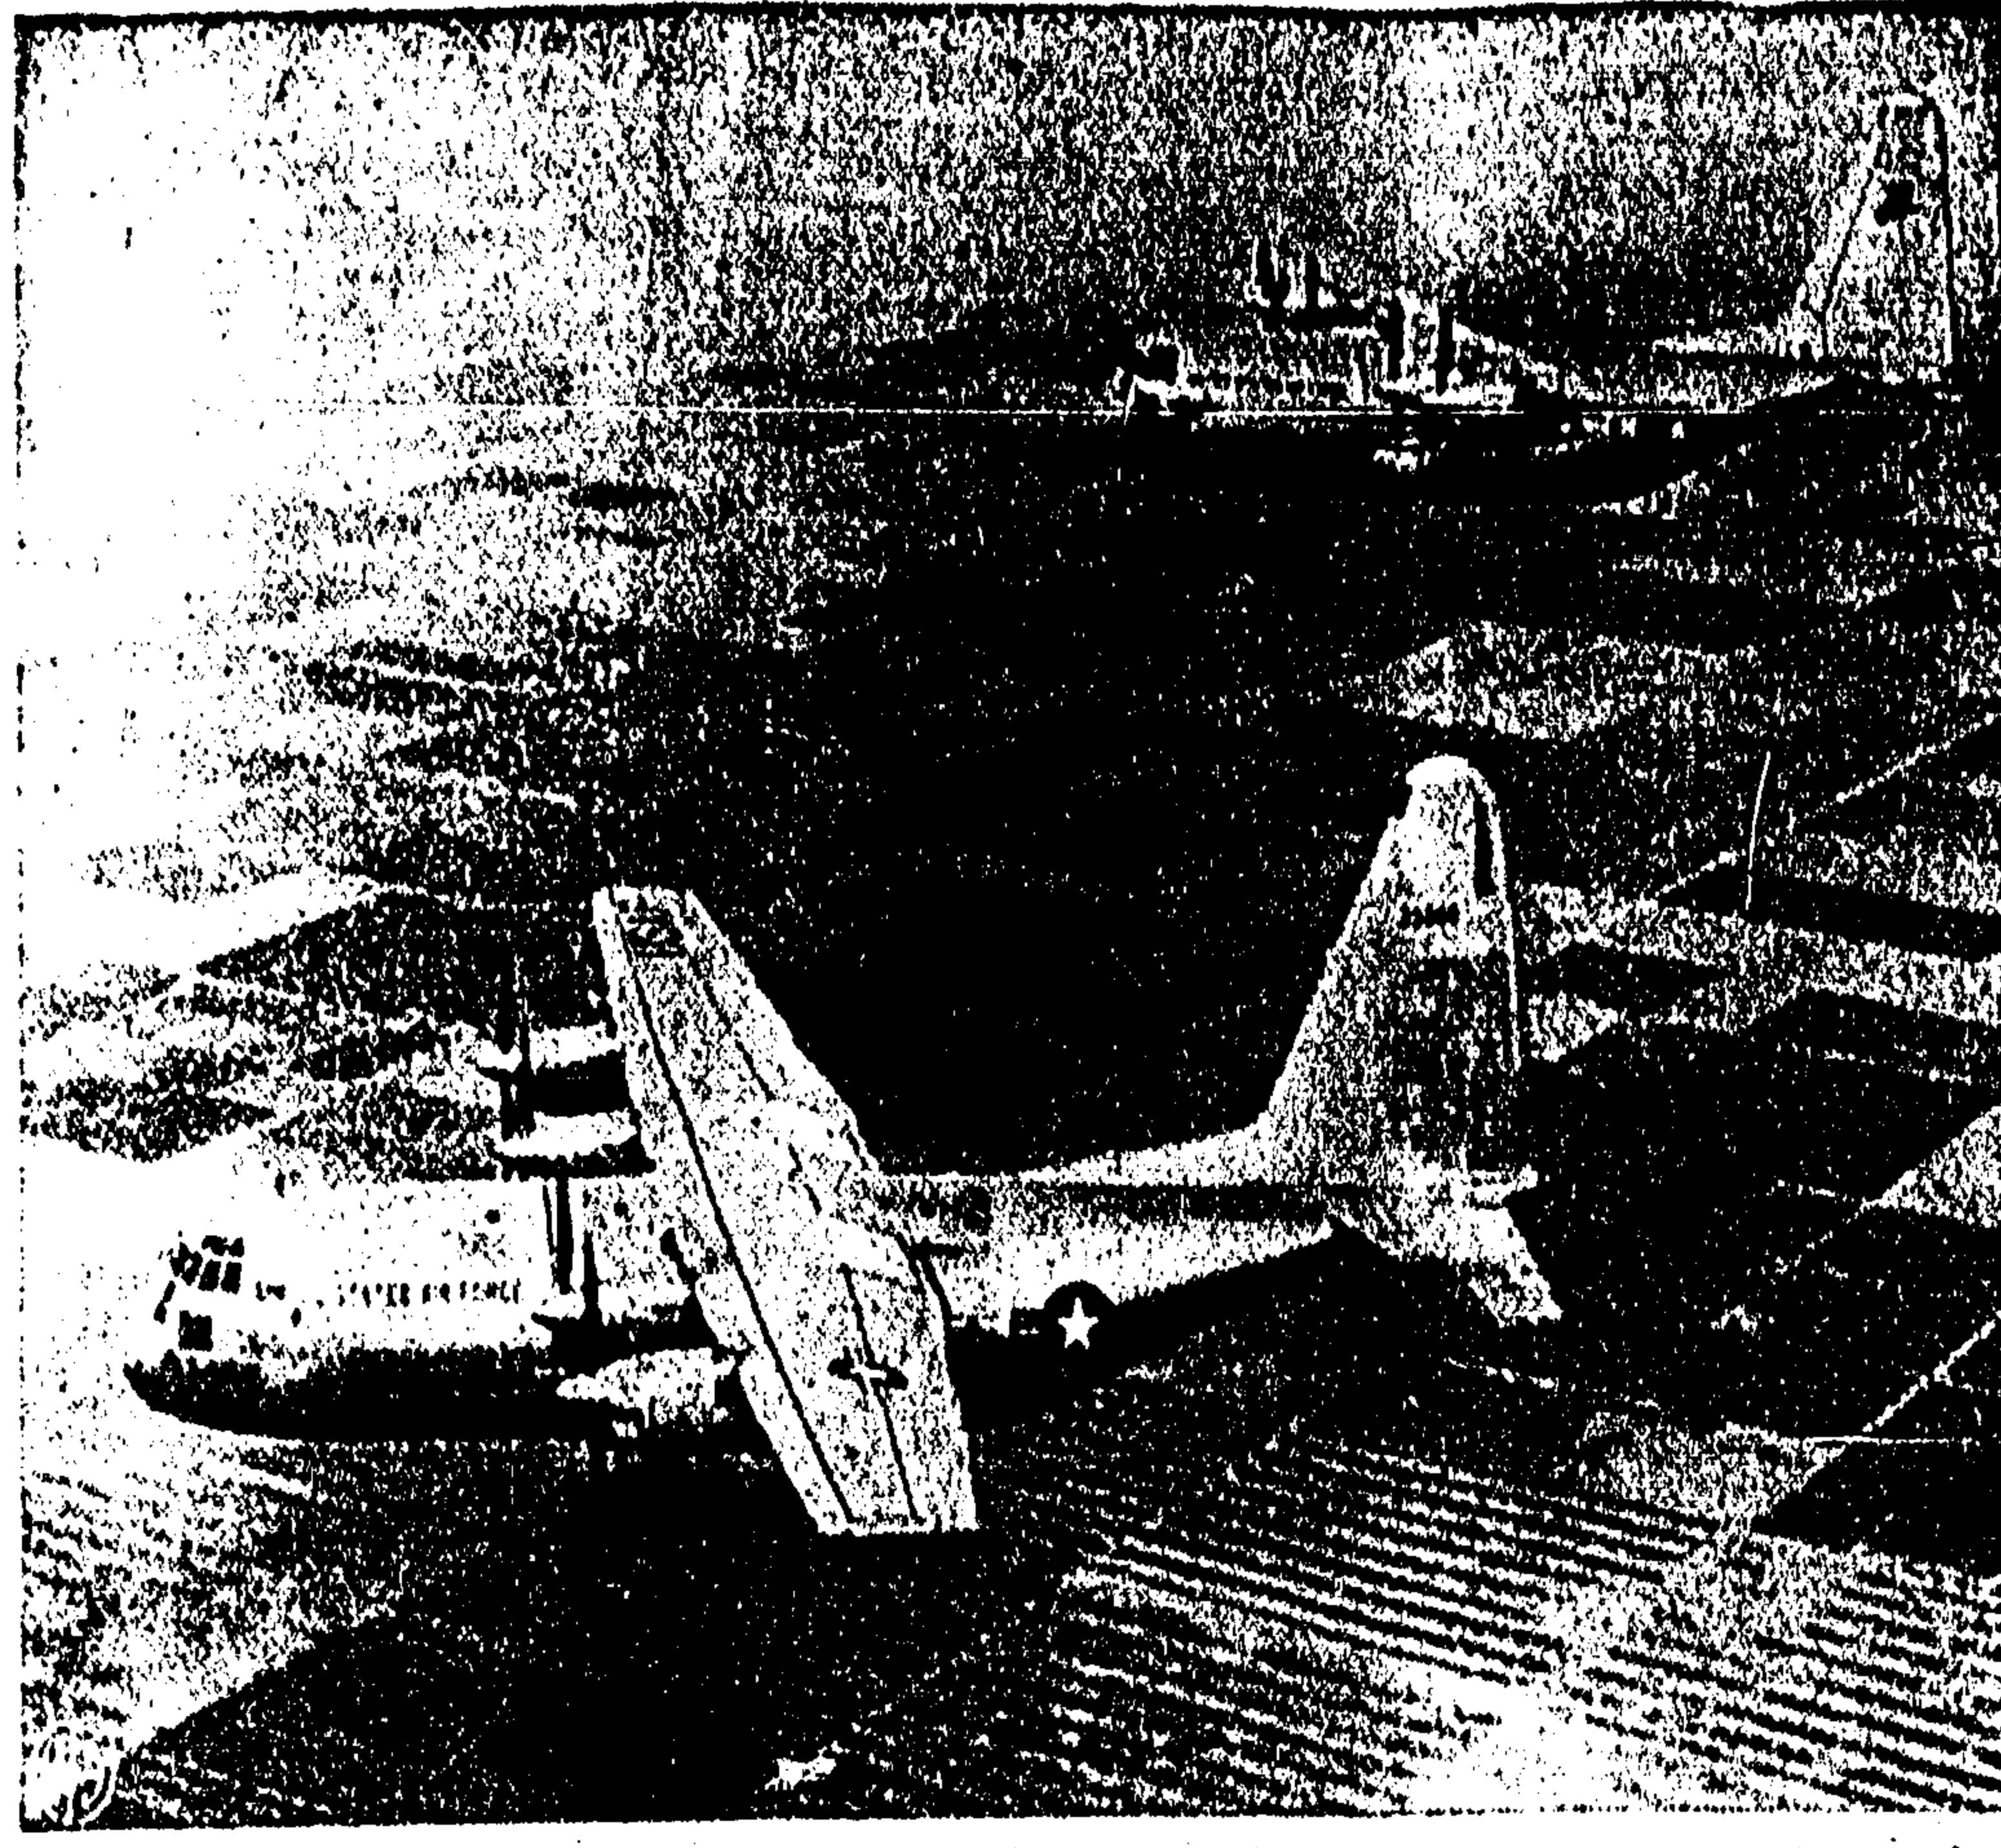

There are four basic problems which the U.S. would like to see settled as a result of the July meeting. These are the reunification of Germany, world disarmament, greater freedom for Russia's satellite countries and the question of East-West trade. Into the realm of speculation about the Big Four meeting, and what it might produce, falls the mystery of the apparent thaw in Soviet relations toward the rest of the world — notably Russian agreement to an Austrian peace treaty, the recent withdrawal from Yugoslavia and the invitation to Chancellor Adenauer to go to Moscow to discuss the opening of diplomatic relations.

High officials here feel the Russians must be paying a tremendous price on one concession alone — their agreement to come to terms on Austria and to remove their troops from that non-occupied land. That decision must have sent through the occupied satellites a wave of hope that they, too, might see the Soviet columns leave their borders.

That sort of thinking, it is emphasized here is something that a dictatorship ordinarily cannot afford.

PREVIEW, ON THE DOUBLE — Flying together for the first time, these two prototypes of the new U.S. Air Force C-130 Hercules transports give a preview of the latest in sky supply trains. This view is over the Antelope Valley's checkerboard of irrigated farms in California. Flight testing indicates that the new C-130 turbo-prop, better the speed of luxury airliners — yet can take off and land in as little as eight airplane lengths. Their 3,750-horsepower turbine-and-propeller engines give them a speed that is still secret.

Movie Bosses Tangle Horns With Two Censorship Boards

By JAMES BACON

LOS ANGELES — The movie's big bosses, most of them blundering men, tangled this week with a United States Senate sub-committee on charges that a score of recent movies have stressed too much sex and violence. Lana Turner's costuming, or lack of it, also was on the agenda.

The sub-committee investigating juvenile delinquency heard from Dore Schary, production boss of MGM; Jack L. Warner of Warner Bros.; Y. Frank Freeman, boss of Paramount; Harry Joe Brown, independent producer; George Sidney, head of the screen directors guild; Jerry Wald, production boss at Columbia; and actors George Murphy and Ronald Reagan.

Senator Estes Kefauver (Dem. Tenn.) and his counsel, James H. Bobo, said the Senate investigators are "critical" of the following movies:

"Blackboard Jungle," "The French Line," "Women's Prison," "Crashout," "Black Tuesday," "Rebel Without a Cause," not yet released, "Ten Wanted Men," "The Prodigal," "Big House, U.S.A.," "New Orleans Uncensored," "I Died a Thousand Times," "Chicago Syndicate" and "Son of Sinbad."

Bobo said the movie men also were questioned about the recent relaxing of the motion picture production code.

LETTER BOX OFFICE?

"We wanted to know why these pictures were approved," he said.

"We also want box-office figures. We want to know if the movies make sex and violence pictures because they make more money than others."

Some of the pictures were quizzed on their advertising campaigns, especially "The Prodigal," a biblical picture that was sold mostly on a revealing cheese-cake photo of Miss Turner's famed torso.

Among the major studios, only 20th Century-Fox and RKO were absent. Bobo explained that Spyros Skouras, head of 20th-Fox, was questioned in Washington. He couldn't reach Howard Hughes, owner of RKO.

William Mooring, motion picture editor of the Tidings, newspaper for the Roman Catholic diocese of Los Angeles, appeared as a representative of the Legion of Decency.

The legion and the code administration two most potent censoring groups in the industry, are at odds.

Drastic Action Seen If Costs Of Police Climb

KAMLOOPS, B.C. — Highways Minister Gagliardi has advised Kamloops city council that the B.C. government will take "drastic action" should costs of RCMP policing be further increased.

Mr. Gagliardi's letter was a reply to a resolution of protest by council concerning the increase of $237 per man to $2,237.

Council has rejected a new contract with the RCMP pending further replies to its resolutions from other government officials.

Police Alerted After Suspect Seen in South

VANCOUVER — All B.C. RCMP detachments and border points were alerted today to be on the lookout for Calgary murder suspect Peter Morrison following a report he was sighted in the Lower Mainland.

Police were told to approach with caution a car believed to be driven by the suspect in the murder of Norman C. Yesney near Calgary May 7.

Morrison, 23, was earlier reported to have been in Vancouver one month ago.

TB DECLINING

FREDERICTON — Declining incidence of tuberculosis was noted in a review by New Brunswick health minister J. F. McInerney. The last six months, he said, produced the first evidence that fewer TB patients are being admitted to hospitals. The tuberculosis mortality rate dropped to 8.8 per 100,000 population from 12.6 in 1953.

BLACKWOOD on BRIDGE

Dale Has Horrible Hand, But Muzzy's a Defender

Mr. Dale had a horrible hand as far as high cards are concerned, but he had a seven-card suit, a void in the opponents' principal suit, his partner had overcalled and the vulnerability was favorable. There was also the important fact that one of the defenders would be Mr. Muzzy. So he bid four spades for a sacrifice.

Mr. Champlion's opening lead was the king of clubs and Mr. Muzzy played the nine spot. That's the trouble with knowing a little about a subject—in this case, the subject of signaling, it's better to know nothing at all.

STARTING SIGNAL

When Mr. Champlion saw the nine of clubs, he figured it to be the start of a high-low signal which, of course, it was. He continued with the ace of clubs, on which Mr. Muzzy played the deuce. It now seemed clear that Mr. Muzzy wanted the suit continued because he had a small spade, higher than dummy's six spot, with which he wanted to ruff a third club lead.

Mr. Champlion therefore continued with the seven of clubs. Dummy ruffed with the six of spades and Mr. Muzzy triumphantly overruffed with the king.

He returned the eight of diamonds to his partner's ace and a fourth club was led. Dummy ruffed with the deuce of spades and Mr. Muzzy, not to be denied, overruffed with the ace. Thus the defenders had to be satisfied with a meagre two trick set.

"Very clever, Muzzy," said Mr. Champlion through clenched teeth. "You kept them from trapping your ace and king of trumps."

WHAT TO DO—
"What do you want me to do?" asked Mr. Muzzy plaintively. "You've been after me to high-

West dealer. East-West vulnerable.

low to show a doubleton in your suit."

"You don't echo just to show a doubleton in your suit."

"You don't echo just to show a doubleton," Mr. Champlion screamed. "You echo to show the doubleton AND some sensible reason for wanting a third round of the suit led. What good did it do you to ruff with the ace and king of trumps?"

IF MR. MUZZY had made the right play of the discouraging deuce of clubs at trick one, the defenders, by correct play from there on could have won four club tricks, two spades and a diamond for a 700-point set.
