\Y/HEN Professor Albert Einstein died a few weeks ago, the first epoch of a new age in philosophical thought ended. While ahead of his contemporaries in many things, Einstein was, nevertheless, the keystone of a new preoccupation that is as modern as the Dior design. For he gave the world parliament is just about finisha new grasp of an otherwise intangible commodity ied, and I have been asked to go

While time of necessity belongs to every century, it is only in our high-speed Twentieth Century that it has ascended to a new peak of prominence. Time study is the core of factory research. Credit buying less. —steadily on the ascendancy since the end of the war—is another concession to time. The four-minute mile creeps into headlines with dependable regularity and the 35-hour week always seems to be peering the shoulders of contract negotiators.

But one of the most radical switches in the offing is the current consideration of a World Calendar · which would revolutionize holiday habits and conceivably send calendar manufacturers looking for something else to print.

While similar plans have been discussed, then discarded, in bygone years, adoption of the World Calendar seems an eventual necessity. From an industrial viewpoint the merits of the new system would undoubtably remove several current head-

The World Calendar divides the year into four quarters of equal length by recording only 364 days. The extra day will have no date other than its designation as World Day and will fall every year between the last day of December and the first day of January. It will not have a place among the seven days of the week. In Leap Year, another similar day will occur between the last day of June and the first day of July.

January, April, July and October will always start on Sunday and have 31 days. The other eight months will each have 30 days. Under the World Calendar, statutory holidays will fall on the same day of the week every year, eliminating the present sys- tem of holidays which float over the seven days of the week.

Among the advantages of the World Calendar will be the new comparative ease of compiling accurate trade and commerce statistics. Thousands of dollars will be saved annually by school boards no longer finding it necessary to draw up and publish detailed and complicated schedules of school holi-

A perplexing aspect of the change would be the necessity of declaring World Day a holiday, which may require that one of our current holidays be dropped. The problem: which one?

Another encouraging note will be the new hope afforded New Year's Eve revellers who will be provided with a period to convalesce and recover in time to enjoy New Year's Day dinner.

There will therefore be a three-week break in these arti-

ABOUT 25 Canadian Senators and MPs will attend the meeting in Paris, beginning on July 18. These represent all four political parties, and also all ten provinces of Canada. The Hon. Wishart Robertson, Speaker of the Senate, will head our delegation, which will also! include Senator's Asseltine and Muriel Ferguson.

The following MPs are due to attend: Liberals-Fraser, Purdy, Cannon, Caron, Bolsvert, Cion, Hellyer, Mrs. Shipley, Studer, Fairey, Philpott.

Conservatives— Liefenbaker, Harkness, Mrs. Fairclough, Bal-

CCF.-Stewart and Johnson. Social Credit.—Hahn.

FRANCE will have the only delegation larger by numbers than that of Canada. But delegations: are expected from all 15 member nations of NATO.

Germany has already accepted the invitation to be there with a strong delegation.

The initiative for the meeting came jointly from Norway and Canada. The other parliaments in the NATO countries have, to date, accepted the Norwegian and Canadian proposals as to procedure and agenda.

The general idea is simply to have MPs from all the NATO countries meet for about three days once a year, to discuss whatever they want to discuss. Some of us think that such annual discussions could possibly breathe some life into Article 2 of the NATO treatywhich up till now have been a dead letter.

Article 2 is the one which calls for better teamwork amon NATO nations, for peace and prosperity rather than just for defence or war.
