

DICK AYRES

We have the honor, we think, to be the first paid-up Prince Rupert members of the B.C. Athletic Round Table Society, the admirable group headed by sportswriter Eric Whitehead and pledged to do the utmost for amateur athletics in this province.

We got this way by parting with a hard-earned buck and acquiring from Tommy McMeekin a BCARTS "Giant Quiz" formby means of which we hope to win one of four fantastic awards (a) a $15,000 dream home in North Vancouver (b) an all-expenses paid round trip for two to Australia with a week at Hawaii thrown in (c) an all-expenses paid round trip for two to New York with a week's stop over in the big city and (d) a treasure chost containing $500 worth of Eaton's gift certificates.

Yours truly joined the BCARTS because as a newsman and ex-sports ed we thought it a worthy cause to support. But Mrs. A., a gal of mercenary mien, persuaded us to part with another semolian purely because she figures that "the dream house" is in the bag due to her ability to call the shots in the sports world. (She knew Charles was going to last 15 rounds against Marciano.)

This Giant Quiz is no fly-by night scheme dreamed up as a money raiser. Only this week we ran a two-column picture of Attorney-General Bonner giving the contest his blessing by purchasing a membership, and the A.G. is not a gent to be caught with his legal loopholes open.

The Quiz definitely calls for brainwork, study and no small knowledge of the sports world. To win one of the four major prizes a person has to choose the order of finish for 20 of the 24 nations competing in the British Empire Games at Vancouver July 30 to August 7. Contestants in the quiz use a point system, with 5 poin's being given a nation taking a first place, 3 points for a second place and 1 point for each third place.

There are a total of 92 events in all sports in the Games and therefore an overall total of 328 points. A quiz contestant does NOT have to list each nation's total points but they are advised to estimate each nation's potential total to compute their order

The persons listing the largest consecutive number of correct places, starting with No. 1, will be the winners.

Here are the BEG entries in alphabetical order: Australia, Bahamas, Barbados, Bermuda, British Guiana, Canada, England, Fiji, Gold Coast, Hong Kong, India, Jamaica, Kenya, New Zealand, Nigeria, Northern Ireland, Northern Rhodesia, Pakislan, Scotland, South Africa, Southern Rhodesia, Trinidad, Uganda and Wales,

Still quite the Empire isn't it?

Well thore you are folks. Tommy McMeekin has the memhership cards for the Round Table Society and you have a chance for the second, third and fourth awards. Don't worry about the $15,000 house 'gus as we said. Mrs. A. is bent on winning it. Of course, if she wins, we won't take up residence in North Van. We'll let her sell it and keep us in Prince Rupert in the manner to which wo've always wanted to be accustomed.

Ballot boxes are to be set up around town, courtesy the district electoral officer, and will probably be at McKay's Grocery, Super-Valu. Orme's Drugs, William's Grocery and Bob Parker Ltd. Contest ends July 29, so, don't delay.
