On the hand preceding this one Mr. Muzzy had played three no trump in a very similar, situation. The dummy had held a diamond suit just like today's -with no side entry-and Mrs. Keen had refused to play her ace of diamonds until the third lead of the suit. This effectively shut out the dummy and resulted in the defeat of the contract.

In today's deal Mr. Muzzy felt a glow of satisfaction and optimism. He saw he had seven tricks outside of diamonds and that if the enemy let him win the first two rounds of diamonds his contract would be made.

WINS OPENING LEAD

Accordingly he won the opening lead of the queen of spades | with the ace and laid down the 10 of diamonds. Mrs. Keen held | off, as expected. Another diamond was led and this time, to; Mr. Muzzy's consternation, Mrs. Keen promptly won with the acc. After that there was no chance for nine tricks.

"I've been stabbed," Mr. Muz-! ----zy cried. "What bad luck that with one or five, he must have you had only two diamonds, started with exactly three and Otherwise you would have laid therefore Mr. Muzzy had two. So off a second time, like you did Mrs. Keen knew it was not only on the last hand." unnecessary to hold up her acc.

"But I held three dlamonds," of dlamonds twice to cut comsaid Mrs. Keen as she showed munications with dummy; it was Mr. Muzzy her third card in also highly dangerous as Mr. that suit.

EXPLANATION USELESS

It was useless to explain to Mr. Muzzy that the decision to win, specifically, the second diamond trick was not a blind stab in the dark but a scientific play based on Mr. Masters handling of his

On the first diamond lead Mr. Masters had played the deuce. On the second had he had play. ed the six. This sequence of playing low and then high indicated that he had an uneven number of diamonds.
