

IN THIS CORNER

Tomorrow night a dapper young man will make another attempt to buck tradition when he makes a public appearance before several thousand people in Yankee Stadium. His is a determined one-man effort to prove "that they do come back."

However, our hero, one Mr. Charles while he may have the best wishes and moral support of a great many people, does not have the financial support of majority of the people on the North American continent, and as a consequence he enters the spotlight as a 1-5 under-dog for his meeting with a rough and ready gent, from Brockton, Massachusetts, Marciano by name.

Now, whereas nearly everyone believes in the fond North American hope that every shoe-shine boy shall end up a tycoon, the fondest thoughts of most people for Ezzard the Charles are tempered by superstition.

And if superstition is not enough, then they can drag out facts or anyway a list of attempts by former champs, that proves "that they never come back." (Of course, in Columbus' day the experts had a fairly tight argument that the world was just as flat as their little empty heads) so in reality, the "never come back" theory belongs in the deep underbrush where you can just see the man who said there never would be a four minute mile pecking out.

However, we do not look to the challenger in tomorrow's bout to be the Golden Boy to break the chain of tradition. For one thing, he wasn't particularly popular when he was champ. He never captured the imagination of Joe Citizen, the sports writers or the back-stage fast buck set, whose influence is never mentioned when the scoring is announced. We feel that Ezzard has not been chosen for the role.

The fighter that does regain the crown will be a very popular chap all round. He will be a popular challenger, popular champion and he will lose the crown because he was hit while blowing a kiss to his ever-loving, dear old mother, happily munching her Hershey bar in second row ringside. That is the type of challenger to regain the title, the kind, home-spun boy who rushes right home after every fight so that he can go over his bank book with his Mom. It will be a real money making fighter who regains the title, a man they can build a million or so dollar gate around.

Tomorrow's parade of the gladiators we feel, won't go too far. It won't be like the time the ringsider dropped his hat during the first round and by the time he's picked it up it was time to go home—it won't be that fast. However, if Mr. Marciano has been watching his P's, Q's and E's, he should be able to do a fairly tidy job by the end of the sixth. This should give him plenty of time to catch the second show at the Bijou and all will be right with the underworld.

The bowling bug seems to have landed squarely in the city and run riot, biting people indiscriminately. Last week people were hauling themselves over the flint and granite approaches of Roosevelt Park to watch baseball, and then all of a sudden, kegling leagues spring up like mushrooms. This is the season that baby sitters, grown lean while parents hoisted their youngsters around with them all summer, now grow sleek and fat—and have a chance to catch up on the latest doings of The Batman as well as try out their employers' latest record acquisitions.

Shortly too, the Civic Centre should take on its bustle of winter activity—and with a bustle, the Civic Centre doesn't look too bad—clubs that have been idle during the summer are starting to pick up the threads again, committees are being formed, and before you know it, here comes the annual plea to appoint someone in your club, group, or organization to send your league's activities in to this department no later than the day or night after they take place.

Next to soggy hotcakes left over from the day before, there's nothing to take the dull fodder prize quicker than old, left over news or sports stories. This department will try to cover as many activities that fall under the name of sport as possible, with the exception of Thursday's (bowling night) but reports indicate that there's more goes on in Prince Rupert than any one person can attend (sports events, that is). So we hope there will be a steady flow of concise, prompt write-ups of your activities.

One word of caution however, deadline for the sports page each day is 10 a.m. That merely means that by the time 10 o'clock rolls around each morning, all the space on the sports page or pages has been used up as the earlier the item comes in, the more chance there is that it will be handled that day.

Understand that the Moose Stag Fishing picnic Sunday was a huge success, according to Eric Martin, who says that the weather was perfect for the event. Eric reports that a certain percentage of those attending took along fishing tackle. Percy Bond, Jim Bacon and Eric himself did, anyway. All three garnered prizes—Percy for catching the largest cut-throat, Jim for the largest Dolly and Eric for the largest coho. Prize of a fishing outfit will go to a winner as yet undetermined.

Hunting season for buck deer, migratory and upland game birds gets underway today in the Eastern District. Commercial hunters are warned to take a little extra altitude over to the east of the Cascade Mountains. A hunter that can mistake a man for a deer at 40 yards—well, what chance has an aeroplane got?

Marlene Stewart Qualifies For Fourth Round Title Play

PITTSBURGH (AP)—Marlene Stewart, Canadian Women's Open golf champion, overcame a painful left hand Tuesday to win two matches and qualify for the fourth round of the United States Women's Amateur tournament.

The 22-year-old girl from Fonthill, Ont., playing with a bandaged hand, survived a shaky second round start to defeat Mrs. John C. Capers Jr. of Ardmore, Pa., Pennsylvania State titleholder, 4 and 2 and then defeated Patricia Devany of Grosse Ile, Mich., 3 and 2 in the third round.

THE UNIVERSITY OF MARYLAND'S head football coach Jim Tatum gives a pep talk to gridiron hopefuls as football practice gets underway at College Park. Tatum, who undoubtedly hopes for a repeat performance by his team, which went to the Orange Bowl after a very successful 1953 season, seems to have lots of muscle on tap to build another powerhouse.

Boundaries Clarified As Hunting Under Way

With the hunting season opening on buck deer, migratory birds and upland game birds in the province's Eastern District today and the season on some species of game opening on Saturday The Daily News prints below a condensed version of game regulations for local nimrods.

A clarification of boundaries for district hunters, as provided by Game Warden Cliff Walker shows that the Eastern District for migratory birds starts to the east of the Khyex Bridge, while the boundary between East and West districts for game and upland birds falls roughly at Remo on Highway 16.

Furthermore, Game Warden Walker points out with regard to hunting deer in the Queen Charlotte Islands that there is no closed season on deer of either sex on the islands, but that deer must be tagged according to game regulations. Deer cannot be exported from the Queen Charlottes after November 30.

Hunters are warned that the tags this year for moose and elk are a combined tag, which allows a hunter to bag one elk or one moose. There is no cow moose season open between here and Prince George.

Penalty provided for persons found in possession of game birds, deer and mountain goat out of season is a minimum of $25 per bird or animal. Illegal possession of grizzly bear, moose, mountain sheep or elk carries a minimum fine of 100.

WESTERN DISTRICT

Game—Bear, Grizzly, Season—Sept. 4-June 30. Bag limits—N. of 57th parallel, two; elsewhere, one.

Black or Brown, no close season. No bag limit.

Deer, bucks or y, over one year of age. No close season on either sex over one year on QC islands. Sept. 18-Nov. 30. Two deer. On Vancouver Island, one.

Moose, bulls, Sept. 18-Nov. 30.

Mountain goat, Sept. 1-Nov. 30. Two goats.

Migratory Birds—Ducks, coots, and geese, Sept. 15-Dec. 13, 8 a.m. as western dist.

Wilson's Snipe, Sept. 15-Nov. 15, running about 30 days. Eight daily, 50 a season.

Upland Game Birds—Blue Grouse, Sept. 15-Oct. 31. Six per day, of one species; eight in agg.; 30 per season in agg.

Ruffed, Sept. 15-Oct. 31.

Simon Pures Call Parley Over Hepburn

VANCOUVER (AP)—A special meeting to consider the thespian activities of the world's heavyweight weightlifting king has been called by the British Columbia branch of the Amateur Athletic Union of Canada.

Decision to call the meeting was announced yesterday by Ken McKenzie, BCAAU president, after he learned Doug Hepburn was working as a strong man with a travelling show troupe.

McKenzie, however, declined to name the meeting date.

Professor Bob Osborne, head of the University of British Columbia physical education department, said Tuesday that, in his opinion, Hepburn now is a professional.

Prof. Osborne is a former national president of the AAU.

The controversy was touched off by Bill Rayner, sports editor of the Trail Daily Times, who reported Hepburn had signed a pro contract with Terry Forbes, director of the travelling show.

Hepburn, in an interview in Vernon, B.C., after the story broke, said:

"Either as an amateur or a professional, I am going to try and make some money. I don't get it. People are worrying about whether or not I turned pro. It wasn't long ago they didn't give a damn if I was an amateur or a pro—or even if I lived."

He was referring to the difficulty he had in raising funds to go to Stockholm last year where he won the title at the world weightlifting championships.

He said he had not signed any contract but added he was not planning to compete in the 1956 Olympics.

Remember when

By The Canadian Press

Frank Chance, of the famous Tinker-to-Evers-to-Chance infield of the Chicago Cubs, died at Los Angeles 26 years ago today. Chance became a great baseball manager after his playing days with the Cubs from 1904 to 1912 and winning the pennant three years in a row (1903-1908). He led the Cubs to world series triumphs over Detroit in 1907 and 1908.

Brooklyn-Giants Series On Weekend To Tell Tale

By ED CORRIGAN

As the National League pennant chase rushes to its climax, it becomes more evident that three-game Brooklyn-New York series next week will decide the winner.

Milwaukee, for all intents and purposes, is out of the running. The Giants took care of that last night with 2-1 victory over the Braves. With 12 games to play, the Braves are 5½ games back, a virtually insurmountable margin. The Giants still lead the Brooks by 3½ games.

Either, of course, could collapse before Monday when the set gets under way in Ebbets Field, but at the rate the two have been going it's hardly likely.

The main pressure is on Walt Alston's Dodgers. They can't afford to lose a single game. Every game presents a crisis with the team for they have only 10 left to play. The Giants have 11 games left.

Actually, no matter what the Brooks do to the Giants, they can gain no more than three games. So they will need assistance from some other club.

If the Braves win the next two games from the Giants, they could help the Brooklyn cause. From there on, the Giants play six games in a row with Philadelphia.

Brooklyn kept in the race last night with a 4-0 triumph over Cincinnati Redlegs behind the fine pitching of Johnny Podres. In "mean nothing" national league games, St. Louis Cardinals defeated the Phillies 5-2 and Chicago Cubs and Pittsburgh split a doubleheader. The Cubs won the first 9-2 and the Pirates, the nightcap 4-0.

In the American League, where it's all over but the shouting, the magic number for Cleveland Indians became two when they turned back Washington 5-2. Any combination of two Cleveland victories or two New York Yankees' defeats, and the Indians are the league champions.

The Yanks, meanwhile, continued to play it out by crushing Detroit 11-0. Baltimore beat Boston 3-1 and Philadelphia A's shut out Chicago White Sox 1-0.

PLUG-ACTION TIPS

REST POP REST
REST DIVE REST
Twitch rod tip to "pop" surface-popper plug between rests. Reel in slack line during pauses. Vary from slow to fast (continuous twitching and reeling). Use twitch-and-rest routine for surface-diving plugs. Always cast to one side of a rising fish; not on top of him. Let surface lures lie still a few seconds before twitching. Vary twitches.

WAIT UNTIL A SINKING LURE TOUCHES BOTTOM, THEN JERK IT FORWARD, PAUSE, JERK, ET CETERA, UNTIL RETRIEVED.
