season.

50th anniversary of Rotary International, was staged in Civic Centre auditorium decked for the occasion with flowers and frills in the best afternoon tea tradition. But the Rotarians, despite their aprons and feminine duties for the day, held out for a strictly masculine theme in decor of their serving table and focal point on stage. The tea table held a hunting scene in miniature, with decoy ducks in a setting of bull rushes, while centering the stage was the familiar Rotary wheel, draped with and the United Nations flag.

"FLOWER-GIRLS" A high point of the afternoon was the antics of two daintly dressed flower girls, Pop Pay and Neely Moore in disguise, with frilly and very short crepe paper costumes, complete with
