IF YOU HAVE A MEMBER of your family home ill, remember that fluids are one of the keys to good-electrolyte nutrition. For swift recoveries they are even more urgently needed than high calories and proteins. Keep a pitcherful of fruit juice or water next to your patient's bed. At no time, soups, tea and soft drinks. Try to persuade your patient to drink at least two quarts a day, three if he has a high fever. Give the patient what he enjoys and he'll drink more. The fluids prevent dehydration and maintain the body's water balance.

YOU CAN ALSO MAKE a delicious, quick casserole from mushroom soup and canned tuna. In a 1-quart casserole, stir together 1 can mushroom soup, 1/2 cup milk, one 7-oz. can drained flaked tuna, 1 cup drained cooked peas, and 1 cup crushed potato chips. Bake at 375 F. for 25 minutes.

A ship's carpenter and shipwright by trade he sailed around the Horn aboard wind-jammers in the days of sail. He came to Prince Rupert about four years ago and about a year and a half ago married Mrs. Anna Dishman, who is his only survivor. The bouffant skirt was emphasized with tiers of netting tapered to illy-point. An ivory crown, beaded with tiny pearls, secured her shoulder-length illusion veil and she carried a bouquet of roses.

Mrs. Karl Mackie, as matron of honor, chose a ball-gown-length gown of pink nylon-over-taffeta while Miss Colleen Sklapsky, as bridesmaid wore contrasting blue nylon-over-taffeta. Both maidens carried bouquets of pink carnations.

Candle-bearer, Miss Marie Pringle wore a ball-gown-length dress of white nylon-over-taffeta and a corsage of pink roses.

Best man was Jack Paul while ushers were Allen Sklapsky and Mr. Mackie. Mrs. Len Dixon provided the wedding music and accompanied soloist Charles Creighton, he sang "A Wedding Prayer" during the singing of the register.

At the reception in the hall of Norway Hall, the bride-table was centred with a three-tiered wedding cake, topped by a miniature bride and groom.

Receiving the guests, under a rose-decorated bower arch, the bride's mother wore a turquoise-colored afternoon dress, navy-blue accessories, and a corsage of pink carnations. The groom's mother wore a emerald-green taffeta gown with white lace collar and a corsage of white carnations.

Mr. Groom proposed the toast to the bride.

Sacred Dance Performed For Queen By Efik Women

CALABAR, Nigeria (Reuters) — A tribal dance so sacred that its performers once faced death if they made a mistake was performed by stately Efik tribal women today before Queen Elizabeth and the Duke of Edinburgh.

As the dancers swayed to the pounding of drums, each held a red feather in her lips to signify the silence and solemnity of the occasion.

The costumes consisted of brilliantly colored hoop skirts, beaded yokes and leggings studded with tiny bells. As they gyrated in the rarely performed ceremonial, they manipulated in their hands a painted gourd, symbol of monarchy among the tribes-people.

Later the Queen and the duke watched the dance at an athletic field after being greeted by thousands on their arrival by the Queen placed a wreath on the grave of Mary Slesor, a Scottish mill girl who became a missionary and labored for 37 years in this area of Africa fighting disease, poverty and ignorance.

The Queen and the duke flew 80 miles to Port Harcourt, Nigeria's second largest port, to witness a parade of magnificent war canoes used by the river tribes in the 19th century.

The war canoes were last in action in this steaming region of mangrove swamps in the "war of rivers" between 1880 and 1882. Each canoe was capable of carrying about 90 fully armed warriors, and many canoes mounted cannon.
