Punish Park Wreckers

IT IS to be hoped that the Parks Board finds a way to impose severe punishment on the young hooli- DEVONSHIRE- On the gans whose malicious aim in life apparently is to itenth anniversary of the wreck the city's parks. Although small children are latom bombing of Japan we included among the pranksters, the worst damage sat in a country notel room appears to be the work of teen-agers. The destruc- 'full of typical English tion of a swing overnight, for example, could only be carried out by youths with more muscle than brains, Their depredations also include the destruction of heavy wire fence meshing and similar perverted feats of strength.

What motivates these young bullies is hard to say. They cannot be excused on the grounds of youthful energy as there are plenty of activities in town in which they can let off steam without hurting anyone or anything. Evidently they are a type of juvenile delinquent who gets a distorted pleasure out of ruining the pleasure of others.

No doubt in many, if not all, cases the parents are at least partly to blame. The fact that so many of the offences are committed late at night or in carly morning indicates a remarkable indifference on the part of some parents about the hours their sons are keeping. This in turn suggests a home life that must be poor in other respects.

But if action is to be effective, the culprits must be dealt with personally. Perhaps when their boys are in real trouble, these heedless parents will be moved to remedy the situation on their own account. Short of that, probably nothing will arouse them.

Shopper's Emotions

NI EXT time we go to a store for a shirt, or a pocket handkerchief, we are going to take closer notice of our emotions. Irving R. Gilman, of the Institute of Motivational Research, Croton-on-Hudson, N.Y., has been researching the motivation of shoppers and has come up with an amazing number of reasons why people buy.

Shoppers, Mr. Gilman says, look to their stores for fulfilment, for freedom of action, for social status, for trust, for encouragement, and for familylike relations. Shopping is "an extremely emotional experience," he says, and even more so if the shopper isja woman.

Many men, it would seem to us, have purchased amair of socks, thinking they did so because an old pair had a hole in it, when their real reason was that they were unfulfilled. We intend to watch that kind of thing carefully from now on. Not ever again is it going to be enough to get a size eleven light grey.

Britain Faces Facts

British Broadcasting Corporation television, like our CBC-TV in Canada is a mixture of good and bad. When it is good it is very very good, but when it is bad it is awful.

This program was one of the best. It began with a Japanese film reconstructing the atmosphere of Hiroshima in the last five minutes before the awful bomb fell.

The British people in the room literally shuddered at the appalling actuality sights from true life and death which had been woven into the film.

They disagreed sharply on the question-should or should mot the allies have dropped the Abomb on Japan? But they agreed completely that the H-bomb had made future blg wars insane and universally suicidal.
