"The opportunities there look so good that I just can't pass it up," Griffing said. "I regret in many ways that I have to leave the Riders, but the future is important and I think the move to Tucson means more security." There was no mention of terms.

The announcement capped a series of reports that Griffing had been hired by the Tucson team. Griffing said today he received an offer from the Cowboys a week ago. On his return he conferred with Riders who said they would not stand in his way.

UNEMPLOYMENT BAFFLES BRAINS

Bigness is hard to ignore. When unemployment becomes big, it can't be ignored, because it is too vital to the country

The Conservatives may say they inherited it from the Liberals, and the Liberals may say that the Conservatives were warned it was coming but did nothing about it. But that won't hide it from them.

The truth of the matter is that NEITHER the Conservatives nor the Liberals know WHAT to do about unemployment. For them unemployment is like the poor—it will always be with us, it SHOULD always be with us. You can't do anything more about unemployment than appear to do something about it. You simply wait for it to go away or look for a little war.

If you believe in unadulterated Free Enterprise, of course, there isn't anything else to do. The forces of the market-place brought unemployployment; the forces of the market-place will take it away.

This in a country as broad and resourceful and undeveloped as our Canada.

Doesn't make sense, does it? Doesn't make sense to vote Conservative or Liberal.

Do you want people in Ottawa who will pass a FULL EMPLOYMENT LAW?

IT TAKES A CCF VOTE, FRIEND. YOU HAVE ONE IN YOU
