MISS JOYCE FACEY

Conrad United Hall Joseph felt that God had a purpose for him. From those days in his teens, when he had the dreams about the sheaves, he had a feeling that God had plans in store for him. Without knowing what this plan was until later, Joseph went ahead preparing himself to be God's servant.

"Oh well, that is only natural." Again after being put in prison through false accusation of Potiphar's wife, he had turned bitter toward women, we would likely say he was justified. But there was in him too great a spiritual excellence, too great a séeking after nobility, to have that happen. When put in prison, instead of retreating into bitterness, he kept his interest in how the other prisoners were getting along. He noticed the strange look on the face of the butler and baker the morning | 22 after they had had their dreams. This kind of genuine interest in other people is a magic medicine for the lifting of the human soul and making it big.
