A CARVED PANEL, tracing out B.C. history on a nine-foot-long section of British Columbia white pine, part of which is shown above, will adorn one of the rooms of the new Government House. Lieutenant-Governor Frank M. Ross has accepted the panelling as a centennial gift from the people of British Columbia for the rebuilt Government House, which will be completed in 1958. Charles R. Scyfort, Victoria, at left, has been commissioned to do the woodearving. On a section of five-inch-thick white pine, he will depict scenes ranging from the arrival of Captain Vancouver to gold panners, farmers, industrial buildings, fishing, wildlife, lumbering and other scenes typical of life and industry in British Columbia. The 40-yearold carver came to Canada from Czechoslovakia six years ago, working the first three years in a northern British Columbia mine, a sawmill and as a window display artist in a Vancouver department store. He came to Victoria and his present job in the government parks division three years ago.

when is a hole not a hole? Why — when Charlie Cotsford is digging it of Course!

You mean you haven't heard? Well Charlies nearly lost his reputation over it and he was threatened with losing 12 hours "pay" too.

It all began with the digging of a hole. First of all it was down to eight seet. Shovel, heave, shovel heave. Next time it was down to 10 feet. More shoveling, more having. This night Charlie measured it. Whew! only three more feet to go. Well -- it should be finished by tomorrow night. That night it began to rain. Water streamed along the streets from every direction. When Charlie went down to the "hole" 'it was full of water, right to the brim. To give Charlie a hand, Dan Gaitens arranged to pump the water out. Just three feet below the surface the bottom of the "hole" appeared That was when they threatened to dock Charlie's "pay". All those hours of work and the hole only three feet down! What happened then?

Oh they decided to keep Charlie on. You see they found the ladder down in the hole too, with just the top of it showing. What job were they working on?

Ism Society. The quota was announced today by T. C. Molville, chairman of the 1957 campaign which will be held in form of a one-night drive Wednesday, October 16.

Mr. Molvillo said the $4,200 quota represents the minimum needs for the care and the treatment of the men and women suffering with arthritis in Prince Rupert.

He said this amount is necessary for the operational cost of maintaining mobile treatment services in this area including maintenance of car and equipment, psysiotherapist ,speclai drugs, consultation service, and intensive treatment at the Vancouver Medical Centre when recommended. Prince Ruport branch is now separate from Torrace.

On the campaign committee with Mr. Melville are William Brown, P. F. P. Bird, George Rorvik, Mrs. Claude Adams and Mrs. Clarke McLean.
