Theirs is the noblest cause of all.

In every walk of life, in any community you'll find them. They come from the farms, from the factories, from the clamouring cities and the murmuring villages. They are teachers, truckdrivers, salesmen, stenographers, business men, bakers, housewives and handymen.

All shades of opinion, all creeds they represent. Yet one philosophy unites them—

"To give and not to count the cost." To labour and not to seek for any reward"

For these are the volunteer workers of the Red Cross, who ask no acclaim, demand no recognition. And somewhere, in some corner of the world, human suffering is eased, hope is re-born through their selfless efforts. Theirs is the noblest cause of all --- the cause of mercy. Won't you help, too?
