For Sure Contract

When Mr. Masters made his first rebid at the three level, he was showing a seven-trick hand. Mr. Dale tried a rebid in diamonds, thinking that if his partner could support that suit and also furnish as Bob Armstrong captured the good as a second round heart control the hand might be destined for a slam.

But when Mr. Masters rebid he had to discount his hand by 2 At a practice shoot Saturday, points because he had only two Sheet Metal notched high single John Leverett of Kitimat got trumps and so he contended ruff, pick up the outstanding | see, if he had ruffed at the third trumps and then try the dia- trick he would have had some mond finesse. If this finesse difficulty picking up Mr. Abel's five trumps with the four left in his own hand. He would have lost a trump trick and a diago for the obvious play. As you mond, too. He would have lost not only the tempting extra trick but his contract as well.

Pass

At trick three he decided to take out a little insurance and, "spend" 30 points, the value of the extra trick, in an effort to make his four spade contract practically ironclad. He simply discarded a diamond.

Now it was not possible for the enemy to shorten his trump suit. If they led another heart, it would be trumped in dummy with the jack of spades. In fact it made no difference what they led at trick four. Mr. Masters! could win any lead and realize a total of 10 tricks, including five spades, four clubs and the ace of diamonds.
