

OUR LITTLE MISS looks very "Fall 1958" in her acrilan and worsted Ivy League striped chemise dress as she talks to a man from outer space (actually a guide from Disneyland's fabulous Tomorrowland, where one can see a capsule blueprint of the world of the future). Her "little girl chemise" with its low, low waistline meeting sharply pleated skirt was designed by Irving Shepard to meet the needs of today's carefree living in a fabric that, thanks to its acriline content, means the dress will hold its fashionable pleats—wash like a dream and be ready to wear in a jiffy with little or no ironing. The guide is wearing what may well become a uniform for the men of 1988 as he explains how Americans might live when pushbutton dwellings like Monsanto's House of the Future become commonplace on Main Street, U.S.A. (Photographed in Tomorrowland section of Disneyland.)

Why the Department is vigilant about fish

Everyone concerned with the fishing industry wants it to grow larger and become more profitable. This is only possible with top quality fish at all times, capable of competing successfully with other high quality foods.

Inspection by the Department of Fisheries—an insistence on good quality-aids the industry in giving consumers what they want, and so helps to sell more fish and fish products.

In addition, educational work, scientific research, inspection of packing and processing plants, and many other operations all combine to help the industry become more efficient.
