IDOL OF THE BRITISH ARMY DIES OF PNEUMONIA

HON. WM. TEMPLEMAN PASSES AWAY—ARMIES OF THE ALLIES STILL MEETING WITH SUCCESS

BRITAIN'S GREATEST SOLDIER DIED WHILE VISITING FRANCE

TRIP TO FRANCE TO VISIT INDIAN TROOPS.—SIR JOHN FRENCH TELEGRAPHS NEWS TO EARL KITCHENER—LOSS KEENLY FELT.

London, Nov. 16.—Great Britain's greatest soldier is dead. Lord Marshal Earl Roberts of Kandahar died last night in France from pneumonia. Sir John French, commander of the British expeditionary forces on the Continent, telegraphed Earl Kitchener, secretary of state for war, as follows:

"I deeply regret to tell you that Lord Roberts died at 8 o'clock (Saturday) evening."

The late Earl Roberts was born in Calcutta, India, on September 29, 1832. He was educated in England, and in 1851 entered the army as a lieutenant. He served in the Indian Mutiny in 1857, being at the siege of Delhi where he was wounded and his horse shot under him. He also served at Allypore, Agra, Kimaj, and Cawnpore, and in the relief of Lucknow. In this campaign he won his Victoria Cross.

In 1893 he was on the northern frontier of India fighting the Mahabharat and in 1898 took part in the Abyssinian campaign. He served as a lieutenant-colonel in the Looshaik expedition in 1902, and in the Afghan war of 1901-2 he commanded the Kucha Valley field force.

His greatest military exploit was his command of the British forces in the historic march of over 400 miles, through a wild, rugged country, from Kabul to Kandahar. For his work on this occasion he was thanked by both houses of parliament and created a baronet. In 1886 he was raised to the peerage on his return from Burma.

In 1899-1900 he was commander-in-chief of the forces in South Africa. As "Bobs," he has long been the idol of the British "Tommy." He had a wonderful memory for faces and repeatedly recognized old men who, in their prime, had served under him on one or more of his expeditions.

If any man could say, "I told you so," in regard to the present war that man was Lord Roberts. Ever since the South African war he tried by impassioned speeches in the House of Lords and out of it to stir the nation to a sense of impending danger. For years he urged the government to adopt some scheme of compulsory military training. He was no advocate of conscription, but believed that every available man should be ready to help defend the Empire. His warnings regarding the "German menace" were looked upon by the vast majority as the imaginings of an old warrior but now we know that he saw farther into the future than most.

His whole life was devoted to the Empire and it was a fitting end to such a career that he should pass away while on duty.

PRINCE RUPERT'S CONTINGENT GETS DOWN TO BUSINESS

(By P. F. G.)

Willows Camp, Victoria, B.C., Nov. 13.—With contingents representing the 50th, 88th, 104th, and Rocky Mountain Range, the 68th of Prince Rupert are now installed out at the Willows concentration camp. The northern contingent is quartered in the machinery building on the exhibition grounds and are very comfortable, under the circumstances. The weather has been very similar to that at home, but the fact that the different arms of the 30th Battalion are quartered in large and roomy buildings makes little difference, as when the weather is stormy the boys keep busy signalling.

On our arrival last Sunday morning the boys were marched to camp and were played in by the regimental band with full honors. Lieut.-Col. Hall praised the boys from the north and on more than one occasion the Adjutant has been most complimentary in his remarks to Lieut.-Col. Peck on the drill of the company.

The northern contingent have been posted to B Company of the 10th Battalion of the Canadian Overseas Contingent. The boys are putting in six hours drill, besides fatigue, etc., of the daily life of the camp. No non-coms. have been appointed, but temporary section commanders have been named as follows: Sergeants Hammond, Birch (Fort George), Ledford (Fort George), Nevill and Godenrath. It is hardly likely that permanent company non-coms. will be appointed until the men have been further drilled and the officers who are at Work Barracks qualifying have taken up the question. The men are full of praise for Col. Peck, who has treated them with every consideration, looked after their wants, attends every parade, and is an ideal officer.

Before the close of the week the men will go down to Esquimalt to be clothed and armed, and in a very short period the northern contingent will be able to attend parades in uniform. Up till now it has been mostly squad and section drill, but the men are very apt and rapidly conforming to the routine of a soldier's life. Many visitors have been out to the camp to see the Prince Rupert contingent and not a few have personal friends to see. Captain Barney Johnson was one of the first to call and shake hands with the men he knew up north.

The men have been treated generously in the matter of leave, as after 4 p.m. they are at liberty, unless on detail, till 10 p.m. Those having business can obtain passes to a later hour. Gradually the camp is settling down to a stricter routine. The very fact that one can go through the sleeping quarters and find the blankets, etc., folded in military style will give some idea of the rapidity in which the boys have dropped into the way of the army.

The food is plain but abundant, and the clubs of Victoria, the hotels and private homes have extended a most remarkable and genuine hospitality to the boys. Many have joined the Y.M.C.A., where excellent accommodation and baths are to be had at a very nominal sum, so there is always a down-town place to hang out.

Bernard McDonald and N. J. McLeod have the contract for putting in the railway spur to the Imperial Oil Company's tanks. Work will start on this shortly.

KAISER IS FURIOUS TOWARD HIS GENERALS FOR THEIR FAILURES

London, Nov. 13.—Frustrated in all his ambitious designs in Russia, France and Flanders, the Kaiser has determined to take the direction of military matters into his own hands, and the general staff of Germany is reported, on excellent authority, to be greatly discomposured, as little faith is felt in the emperor's strategical ability. Notwithstanding tales of ill-health of General von Moltke, it seems clear that his removal from the office of chief of staff is due entirely to the dissatisfaction of the Kaiser with the failure of the elaborate plans of the war machine, which were to have placed Germany in control of Paris long ago, to have resulted in the occupation of the French Channel ports and to have conquered Russian Poland.

Von Kluck in Trouble. Following the substitution of General von Falkenhayn for Von Moltke as chief of staff the Kaiser recalled Von Kluck from the most important command in France and Flanders and is said to have upbraided him, not only for failing to reach Paris, but also for the failure to reach the French Channel ports, an objective which the Kaiser earnestly desires, not on account of any important military advantage to be obtained thereby, but because he wished to be in a position to threaten Britain.

After more than three months of warfare, the Kaiser has to satisfy the demand of the German people for substantial success by allusions to the conquering of Belgium, a trivial feat for the German army, and the occupation of a portion of northern France. Against this the German people are aware of the invasion of Alsace as a base for an advance upon the Rhine by the French and the invasion of eastern Prussia by enormous forces of the Russians after a disastrous failure of the Poland campaign.

Puppet of Kaiser Appointed. Von Moltke's fall is blamed upon court intrigues and disputes, the desire of the Crown Prince, whose campaign has been far from successful, to act entirely upon his own initiative, and the autocratic temper of the Kaiser himself. Von Moltke is not well, but it is well known in Berlin that his ill health is not sufficient justification for his removal. His successor as chief of staff is declared to be merely a puppet of the Kaiser and a strategist far inferior to Gen. Joffre or Lord Kitchener.

TWELFTH EPISODE OF THE "MILLION DOLLAR MYSTERY"

At the Westholme Opera House Tonight

Public interest in the final outcome of the famous Million Dollar Mystery as shown at the Westholme Theatre for some time, is becoming more intense as time goes on. Tonight the twelfth episode will be shown. In this, the treasure box, which Jones, the butler, threw into the sea in a marvelous episode, suddenly appears, only to vanish again quite as suddenly, right before the eyes of the conspirators, who had thought the million dollars quite safe within their grasp, only to be outwitted at the very last moment by Jones, the butler, and Norton, the reporter.

Wednesday and Thursday an exceptionally fine five-reel feature, "The Old Curiosity Shop," will be shown together with a new War Gazette.

Chance for Excitement.

If you're ever out in a boat and you come across a sheet of water with a thin surface of ice on it keep right on going if you want lots of excitement and wish to take your life in your hand. The ice will chop its way through the planking of your boat like so many chisels and the water will pour in and if you do not lose your boat and perhaps your life it is because you are full of resourcefulness. This is just what a party of hunters did Saturday morning on going up Dennis Arm and before they got the boat to the shore it was half full of water. Then it was found that the shore was too steep to beach the boat and something had to be done to keep her from sinking. An old shirt was packed into the opening and the boat paddled to a shallow beach, where the break was mended.

We have just received a shipment of Royal Society Packages. We also have a fine line of stamped pillow cases and guest towels. Demers. 264-265

HON. WILLIAM TEMPLEMAN HAS JOINED GREAT MAJORITY

DEATH TOOK PLACE AT HIS HOME YESTERDAY—WAS PROMINENT IN CANADIAN PUBLIC LIFE—MEMBER FOR THIS DISTRICT ONE TERM.

Victoria, Nov. 15.—Hon. William Templeman died here today at 3:20 p.m.

William Templeman was born at Almonte, Ontario, in 1844. He entered the newspaper business early in life and established the "Gazette" in 1867. He came to British Columbia in 1884 and became associated with the Daily Times, of which he later secured control. In the early days of his venture he met with considerable difficulties, but ultimately success and prosperity came his way.

He was an unsuccessful candidate for the House of Commons in 1891 and again in 1896. He was appointed to the Senate in 1897. In 1902 he entered the Laurier cabinet as minister without portfolio. In 1906 he was appointed Minister of Inland Revenue and resigned from the Senate and contested a seat for the House of Commons, being elected in Victoria. In 1907 he was appointed Minister of Mines but was defeated in Victoria on appealing to his constituency in 1908. An opening was made for him, however, in Comox-Atlin, where he was elected by acclamation in 1909. In 1911 he was again defeated in Victoria and since then he has been out of public life.

For the last year or so Mr. Templeman has been in bad health. A few months ago the death of Mrs. Templeman occurred and this weighed heavily upon him and hastened his end.

Mr. Templeman has had a distinguished career as a public man and his death will cause great regret to a large number of people.

JOSEPH MARTIN MAY BE CANDIDATE FOR MAYOR

Vancouver, Nov. 13.—There is a chance that Vancouver's next mayor will be Mr. Joseph Martin, who is again living in Vancouver, though he still holds his position as member of the British House of Commons for St. Pancras. Mr. Martin told a meeting of the Civic Reform Association last evening that if the call to the front were sufficiently strong he would be found in the fighting line on the second Thursday of next January. This is the first time that Mr. Martin has seriously been proposed as the candidate for mayor of any city. If he succeeded it would also be the first time that any Canadian city would have as its chief magistrate a member of the Imperial House of Commons.

Mr. Martin at the outset expressed the opinion that many of the largest ratepayers in the city had not done their duty in the past in regard to civic government. The time had arrived in the history of the city when every citizen should do his part in trying to bring about better government. He would not think of running for the mayoralty unless he was convinced that there was a general desire to see him a candidate. Otherwise he would not think it his duty to do so. He did not want the office except it was conferred on him by the unmistakable wish of the electors.

"If the citizens of Vancouver take steps to satisfy me and this association that I am wanted I will be a candidate," he declared. "Moreover, I will not run if I am expected to canvass. I never canvassed a vote when I ran in this city last in 1908. I would address as many meetings as possible, but I would not undertake any large expense. I would consider it an honor to be mayor of Vancouver but it would also entail considerable sacrifice on my part.

For Parliament Also.

"I am a party man and I may be a candidate for the House of Commons at the next elections. This association should consider whether that would be a drawback or not. If elected my political leanings would make no difference in civic affairs. I do not want politics in municipal affairs, but the association should consider this aspect of the matter.

"Another stipulation I would make is that before I run I must be convinced that good aldermanic material is in the field. A mayor must have a good council to help in making a good administration. I would like to see new aldermen from every ward. I would want also to be assured of the support of the labor men."

SOCIETY CIRCUS STARTS TONIGHT; SEE THE PARADE

Featuring a real steam piano, the Society Circus procession will form on Second Avenue this evening and as soon after 6 o'clock as possible the start will be made. The line of march will be along Second Avenue to Seventh Street, on Seventh to Third Avenue, thence to Fulton Street, thence to Exhibition Hall. The procession will be illuminated and will include the Metlakatla Band and the new City Band. It is advertised that many new and original features will be seen. Immediately after the parade the circus will commence and continue until midnight. The Restaurant and Lunch Rooms at the Show Grounds are fully equipped to serve suppers and lunches, so that those who are employed up until 6 o'clock may arrange to see the procession and repair immediately to the circus where they can provide themselves with a good lunch or supper at a very low price.

It has been decided to continue the show for three nights instead of two as was first intended. Monday night will be the opening with the procession; Tuesday night a change of programme downstairs, including Billy Orms vaudeville show and will be known as balloon night, hundreds of toy balloons will be liberated in the big building; and Wednesday night a mammoth masquerade will be held for which the circus ring will be taken out.

Tickets for the circus have been placed on sale at Orme's, and it is expected that many will purchase their tickets in advance so that there will be no delay at the doors on opening night. The prices of gate admission are 25 cents for adults and 10 cents for children, and for the grand masquerade on Wednesday night the admission will be 50 cents, which includes supper.

It is a wonder, but there are some people who fancy that Germany has free institutions like our own, and that the German people rule.

Price Collier, an American writer who died recently, wrote a book entitled "Germany and the Germans." He was not an enemy but an admirer, almost a worshiper, of the Kaiser.

Collier says, "there is no such thing in Germany as a democratic or representative government." He says there is no use in comparing Germany with England or the United States.

contemptuously, as a necessary and often stubborn and unruly pack-animal, by the Kaiser-appointed Ministers.

How does this happen? Essentially because the German rulers are very arrogant, and the masses of the German people are very obedient.

The three-class system of voting prevails in Prussia, the dominating German state. According to this system, the voting power of a man depends upon the amount of taxes he pays, that is upon his wealth.

G. H. Perris, in a work entitled "Germany and the German Empire," gives the result of a Prussian general election. The number of votes cast was 2,360,247.

ought to have had 413 seats out of 443. They actually had seven seats out of 443—less than one-sixtieth, instead of more than one-fourth.

The government of Prussia is not only autocratic, but plutocratic. The franchise is not manhood franchise, but money franchise.

The person who is supposed to correspond with the Prime Minister of Britain or Canada is the Chancellor of the German Empire. But there is no real resemblance.

PRUSSIAN GREED AND HATRED CAUSED THE WAR

BRITAIN THE SOLE BARRIER BETWEEN GERMANY AND HER GAINING WORLD DOMINATION—SIR GEORGE FOSTER'S VIEW.

"The destiny of Canada is being decided on the bleak fields of Belgium and on the battle-torn plains of France," said Sir Geo. Foster in an address in Convocation Hall, Toronto, at the open meeting of the University College Literary and Scientific Society.

"I have heard it said that Great Britain would never dare to enter into war without first consulting the overseas dominions. There was no consultation at this war.

GERMAN HATRED OF BRITAIN.

"France nor Russia wanted war. The documents in these white papers show that they didn't. The great determining factor in this war is the lust of world-power and domination.

trality was not the only reason for Britain's participation in this war. What would have happened, had Britain drawn her ships about her and held aloof? France would have been defeated, Belgium would have been a vassal.

President Bone's Inaugural. Mr. John R. Bone, president-elect, was introduced by Mr. H. C. Hindmarsh, retiring president.

"Suppose Germany, following peaceful lines, had surpassed Britain as a commercial and political power, would not good old John Bull have been the first to take off his hat to her?

Premier Hearst complimented Sir George Foster on his splendid address, and President Falconer and Principal Hutton tendered a hearty vote of thanks to Sir George and the Premier.

JAPS MOUNTED PARAPETS OF FORTS IN HAIL OF BULLETS

Tokio, Nov. 14.—A detailed official account of the operations before Tsing-Tau has been made public. It is couched in modest terms but it shows that the storming of the German stronghold was characterized by the same recklessness and disregard of life that the Japanese soldiers evinced in the war with Russia.

Led by a detachment of engineers, who exploded a powder magazine of the enemy at a heavy cost in lives, the Japanese mounted the German parapets in a deadly rain of bullets from the machine guns.

NAVAL BATTLE OF TWO AGAINST TWELVE

Neutral Expert Thus Characterizes Engagement Off Chilean Coast "All-Big-Guns" Won.

New York, Nov. 16.—"The battle of two against twelve," was how a foreign naval expert, now in this city, and who is connected with neither of the squadrons that fought off Coronel, characterized the struggle of the British and Germans, according to The Herald.

"It was the two 9.2 guns of the Good Hope against twelve of the sixteen 8.2 inch guns of the Scharnhorst and Gneisenau," he said. "The Glasgow and the three small German cruisers can be left out of the question, for their guns are not of calibre large enough to do damage at long ranges.

"At 5,000 yards, the numerous six-inch guns of the Good Hope and Monmouth were practically unavailing against the six-inch belt of armor of the big German cruisers, having at that distance penetration of three inches, while at that same distance the sixteen 8.2-inch guns of the Germans could pierce, on normal impact, seven and one-half inches of armor, a thickness largely in excess of the belt armor of the Good Hope (six inches) and the Monmouth (four inches).

"It is evident then that beyond 5,000 yards the Germans had only to fear the two 9.2-inch guns of the Good Hope, in a broadside fight, while the British vessels would be under fire of twelve of the German's 8.2 guns.

A Foregone Conclusion.

"There is no doubt," he continued, "that Admiral Craddock, whose vessels had a slight advantage in speed over the two bigger German cruisers, attempted to close with them, for at 4,000 yards or nearer he would have been able to put the numerous 6-inch guns of his cruisers into play and thereby better his chances. But in making straight for his opponents he would increase the odds against him, for in a stern chase the Scharnhorst and Gneisenau still could each use their 8.2-guns, while the only piece in his whole squadron that the British admiral could use would be the bow 9.2-inch gun of the Good Hope. All the Germans had to do was to keep at 5,000 yards range or beyond, and they had the British vessels hopelessly outclassed, whether in a running fight or exchanging broadsides.

"The result of such a contest was a foregone conclusion. In my opinion, the British squadron could not possibly have made a better showing than it did.

"One point of great interest to naval men," said the expert, "is that this conflict has proved the superiority of the all-big-gun policy. Had the Good Hope, with more than 2,000 greater tonnage than the German cruisers and 4,000 more horsepower, been armed with a main battery of 9.2-inch guns, there would have been a different tale to tell.

"One must not, from this," he concluded, "rush to the conclusion that should the British and German main fleets clash the same result would follow, for the big-gun policy has been followed out on all the British dreadnoughts."

Lesson of the Pacific.

Under the caption of "The Lesson of the Battle in the Pacific," The Herald's military critic said: "The result of the naval battle off the southern coast of Chile is, in the opinion of naval men, a most serious one to the British, and to the American navy the lesson is of the utmost importance.

"The fight was in essentially British weather, heavy sea conditions such as prevail almost continuously north of the west Patagonia passes, and it is for just such weather that vessels of the Good Hope and "County" class, of which the Monmouth is one, have been built.

"For years the British have doggedly adhered to the principle of building warships with a view of heavy weather conditions of battle and have sacrificed batteries for the sake of more weatherly qualities. They lost the Guerrero and the Java in 1812 to the Constitution, all vessels of the frigate class, largely because the Constitution outbattered the British craft.

"The British have repeatedly criticized the American policy of late years as providing a too great weight of battery per ton of ship, but the American policy was held to the 1812 practice and continues to hold, and the significant part is that the Germans have followed American methods.

"The battery of practically every German warship of the Premier class today shows the maximum of artillery compatible with tonnage displacement.

"The time has passed in modern naval warfare to consider that seamanship and mere bravery can offset artillery preponderance. A preponderate battery in the hands of untrained, unskilled men might count for little when opposed to a highly trained personnel, though provided with an inferior battery, but it has been known for many years that the Germans have reached to an extraordinarily high efficiency in naval gunnery, and their enterprise and bravery cannot be questioned. Given, therefore, equally efficient personnel both as to seamanship and gun work, and, not allowing for errors of judgment, the result of a naval battle in the open sea as between numerically equal forces should rest with that side possessing the preponderance of artillery.

"This is exactly what has occurred off the southern Chilean coast."

DETAILS OF CAPTURE OF SAMOA PUBLISHED

Officer Commanding New Zealand Expeditionary Force Reads Proclamation After British Flag is Hoisted.

London, Nov. 15.—Details have been received from Wellington, New Zealand, of the capture of Samoa by a New Zealand force, as previously reported. The capture of German Samoa was the first task allotted to New Zealand by the Imperial Government, and it is to the credit of the New Zealand government that within ten days after the declaration of war they had organized, equipped and despatched the necessary force for the purpose. There was no lack of volunteers either for this expeditionary force or for the main force of eight thousand which is hoping to serve in England. The advance force consisting of 53 officers and 1351 men was dispatched in two troop ships and the first part of the journey was not without risk as it was known that the German cruisers Gneisenau and Scharnhorst were making for those waters while the only protection afforded was that of three small cruisers, the Philomel, Psyche and Pyramus. But at Noumea the convoy was joined by the battle cruiser Australia and the protected cruiser Melbourne of the Australian navy together with the French armored cruiser Montcalm, the three being engaged in rounding up the German craft. The expedition arrived at Apia on Sept. 3, and as previously reported, the Germans offered no resistance.

Proclamation Issued.

The British flag was run up and Col. Logan, the officer commanding, issued a proclamation as follows: "The New Zealand government of His Britannic Majesty, King George V, now occupy for His Majesty all the German territory situated in the Islands of the Samoan group."

This was a remarkable event in the history of British Overseas Governments, for with the permission of Downing Street, the annexation was thus made to New Zealand and the islands are being administered by New Zealand.

Debt Acknowledged.

At the same time New Zealand freely acknowledged the debt she is under to the Commonwealth of Australia, without whose armored ships the expedition would have been impossible. The great value of the Australian navy has further been shown by the annexation by Commonwealth troops under their own naval escort of the important Bismarek Archipelago and German New Guinea. These object lessons and the general protection which New Zealand commerce and even her coasts owe to the Australian fleet have done much to stimulate the movement for a New Zealand naval force capable of performing these duties in time of war.

RUSSIAN WOMEN
DON MALE ATTIRE
AND JOIN THE ARMY

London, Nov. 16.—The Petrograd correspondent of The Morning Post says:

"The number of women coming back wounded from the Russian front proves that the contingent of adventurous females on the fighting lines is considerable. These women as a general rule cut their hair, assume a soldier's uniform and get secretly, with the connivance of friends, among the soldiers. Others start alone on various pretexts, such as seeking injured relatives, and then don the male attire when they reach the front.

"A Cossack girl trooper, Helen Choba by name, went with the full knowledge and permission of the authorities, having long been distinguished as a horsewoman, swordswoman and a marksman.

"Col. Tomilobskayas' daughter, who in male uniform on the Augustowo front distinguished herself as a scout leader, has been wounded three times."

A CANADIAN WOMAN WEPT ALOUD AT SIGHT

Arrival of Sad-Faced Belgian Refugees at a London Station.

The experiences of a Canadian woman in getting out of Switzerland and through France and England back to this side of the Atlantic are graphically told in the following letter from her to a friend in Toronto:

"I left Switzerland October 3. I traveled with an English lady who speaks French. The train going through France left from Geneva, so we went there the day before and spent the night. It was a long train, and at the French frontier we all got off and carried our hand baggage, and stood in line for two mortal hours, hanging on to our belongings, while our passports were examined by three men and signed by them. Then there was a long delay while trunks and bags were looked into by the Customs authorities. We got to Lyons at 11:30 the first night, and had to change there into a train coming from Marseilles. When the train arrived it was packed, men and women lying in the corridors. So we went to a near-by hotel, got up at 5 o'clock next morning, and took train for Paris at 6 o'clock. All day we traveled at a snail's pace. Took our provisions with us for the whole journey. France was too busy looking after the soldiers to bother over mere travelers. It was indeed splendid of them to allow us transportation.

"All the railway stations along the route are turned into hospitals for sick and wounded soldiers. We saw hundreds of convalescing ones sitting out in the sun; some with bandaged heads, arms, legs, others walking about looking so thin and worn, all showing they had been through the war. The Red Cross nurses, all in white, with long, white veils were very much in evidence. The scene was most weird at night, when, by the lights in the station and other buildings, we could see in some places the soldiers cooking their suppers and others sitting at long, board tables eating and drinking. At other places the women of the town were cooking for them—right in the open—and the soldiers would bring their cups and plates for their supply. At other places we could see them lying on their bundles of straw. I saw numbers of Zouaves and Turcos among the French soldiers. They are very conspicuous in their picturesque costumes.

"We got to Paris at 12 o'clock at night. All that long day going from Lyons to Paris! We found a near-by hotel. Next morning we had an early drive through Paris. We wanted to see a part of it under the changed conditions. Changed! It did not seem possible it could be Gay Paris. We went through the avenues that in normal times would be full of people and street traffic. It was all like a city of the dead. Two-thirds, I am sure, of the beautiful shops were closed. There was scarcely anyone in the streets. Hardly a vehicle of any sort to be seen. A mile or so out of Paris, and for many miles, we saw soldiers digging trenches and laying barbed wire entanglements; cutting down trees and brush to further fortify Paris. This we saw as we resumed our railway journey.

"We got to Dieppe early in the afternoon, and went from there to Folkestone. A ship came in the harbor just as ours did. It was from Flushing, Holland, and was full of refugees from Antwerp and other Belgian towns. At Folkestone there was such a long wait on board ship while we all lined up in single file to have passports examined and pass a medical inspection. We got to Victoria station by 9:30. My friend left me there on the station platform, sitting on my hand baggage, waiting for my trunk to be brought forth.

"I waited there one hour and a half, and while I waited the train came in with the Belgian refugees, and they all fled by me. Antwerp was then being bombarded. There were over 200 nuns from an Antwerp retreat. I just wept aloud as those sad-faced women went by me, and following them came a crowd of women and old men and little children, carrying their poor little bundles. I'll never forget that sight. I could not stand it, and what must it be to them! Their homes and bread-winners gone and they facing a new life in a foreign land. Oh! it was pitiful. There were motor buses waiting to take them all to some place of refuge, and as they drove off such a cheer went up all over the station—a cheer for poor, stricken Belgium."
