RUSSIANS DISLodge GERMANS WITH BAYONET AND THEIR CAVALRY FOLLOW UP RETREATING INFANTRY—FIELD GUNS WITH TEAMS COMPLETE CAPTURED.

(Special to The Daily News)
Petrograd, Nov. 28.—(Official.)
On the left bank of the Vistula our troops, advancing from the lower part of the Bzura River, reached Gombin.
In the center battle line we captured the town of Brzeziny and villages in the valley of the Droge River. In some places we isolated the Germans by the ground.
Also between Brzeziny and Gombin our cavalry succeeded in making several charges against the German infantry. During the retreat of the enemy we captured several field guns, some with teams completed. We are capturing the number of prisoners captured.
Among the German troops we pushed back from Rzgow Tuszyn toward Brzeziny was a division of the Prussian guard.
In the region of Sgiera Zdunska some German troops are still holding themselves in trenches.

RAINBOW REPORTED IN FIGHT WITH LEIPZIG AND NUREMBERG

BATTLE PAPERS CLAIM THAT FRENCH CRUISER MONTCAIRM SAVED RAINBOW AND TOWED HER IN DAMAGED CONDITION TO ESQUIMAULT.

It is reported from Portland, B. C., that the Rainbow met the German cruisers Leipzig and Nuremberg off the Oregon coast and escaped after being badly damaged and many of her crew wounded.
She effected her escape through the assistance of the French cruiser Montcairn. The Rainbow is said to be drydocked and undergoing repairs at Esquimault, to which port she was towed by the Montcairn.
Seattle papers claim that the censor kept the news from the Canadian public. (Ex. Seattle Star.)

LOCAL AMATEURS AT THE MAJESTIC

At the Majestic last night some very fine pictures of the various regiments leaving headquarters for the front were shown and also views of the various Belgian cities before and after the German bombardment.
Of the amateur artists, none gained the sympathy of the large audience more than Miss Delamata, a cute little mite, who gained first prize.
Songs were also rendered by Messrs. Harvey and McGuire; a violin solo by Mr. Scheinman, and a club swinging exhibition, by Master Sherman.

Mr. J. W. Stewart, president of the Pacific Great Eastern Railway Company, stated in Vancouver that at the present rate of progress the grading of the railway will be completed from Squamish at the head of Howe Sound, to Port George during the present year.

TRANSFERRING THE CREW OF THE AUDACIOUS TO SAFETY—The picture shown above was taken from the deck of the rescue ship Olympic and sent to New York. It shows the Audacious listing badly in the heavy sea, but of course does not prove that she sank. Up to date not a word has come over the cables from England admitting her loss, although according to the passengers it took place on October 27th. All attempts to get information on the subject have been unanswered.

GERMANS SEEM TO HAVE ABANDONED RUSH FOR CALAIS

(Special to The Daily News.)
London, Nov. 28.—There are strong indications that the fresh attempts by the Germans to force a way to Calais by turning or piercing the Allies left wing are being abandoned almost as soon as begun. This means but one thing, the immediate retirement of the Germans from West Flanders.

BOXING CONTEST AT NATIONAL CLUB TONIGHT

The middleweight boxing contest to be held at the National Sporting Club tonight should prove to be a good encounter as both men have had great experience in the ring, are trained in the best condition and evenly matched.
The contest is to be at 158 pounds, weighing at 3 o'clock this afternoon.
McDermitte hails from the Eastern States and has a good record in the ring.
McKay hails from Vancouver and has defeated all the middleweights in Western Canada.
McDermitte appears to be the heavier but both men have shown up well in their training.
There will be one good preliminary and the main bout is scheduled for 10:15. There has been a good advance in the sale of tickets and the crowd is expected to be a fairly good one.

PLACARDS DEMANDING PEACE ARE POSTED IN BERLIN CITY

Posters Are Torn Down by Police but Always Reappear—Not Anxious to Catch Offenders.

London, Nov. 27.—The Copenhagen correspondent of The Daily Mail says he learns from Berlin that placards are posted nightly in the suburbs of the German capital, demanding peace and containing threats. The police tear the posters down but they always appear the next night and the authorities do not seem anxious to catch the offenders for fear of drawing further attention to the peace agitation.

KIPLING VISITS SOLDIERS.

Goes to Salisbury and Mingles With Canadians.

London, Nov. 27.—Rudyard Kipling, who has written many good things about Canada's patriotism during the present war, went to Salisbury Plains to see the Canadian troops at work. In charge of Colonel Turner, commander of the Third Brigade, he visited most of the camp centers and appeared much impressed with the thoroughness of the training and the earnestness with which the men tackled their strenuous duties. Later in the day he was entertained at lunch by Colonel Turner, attended by his brigade officers, whose general appearance and fitness the famous author favorably commended upon.

SPECULATING ON END OF THE WAR

Brisk Business Being Done at Lloyd's—Fall in the Rate.

London, Nov. 28.—Brisk business was done at Lloyd's yesterday in "end of war speculation," that the war would be over by March next. There is a certain volume of opinion there that thinks the chance is good. Enquiries in the city yesterday showed that last week 75 guineas per cent was quoted for a policy under which total loss would be paid in the event of the war not being over by the end of next March. The rate had fallen to 60 guineas.

On the other hand, there has been an increase during the last week or ten days of five shillings to seven shillings and sixpence and even ten shillings in full war risk rates of insurance on private house property on the East Coast. For big works such as the Tyne yards, the rate has advanced ten shillings to one pound. What is in the minds of the few underwriters who are speculating on the end of the war is secret, but the question of German supplies is being much talked about in the city.

EVERY CONFIDENCE IN BRITISH NAVY

PRINCE RUPERT CADET CORPS HOLDS BANQUET

Inspiring Speeches by Mayor Newton, Rev. Mr. Dimmick, O. H. Nelson, Canon Rix and Others.

Last evening the Cadet Corps of this city, which has been organized and trained by Mr. George Leek, gave its first banquet in the Knights of Pythias Hall. In addition to the forty members of that body that were present there also gathered a large number of the parents and friends, including the resident clergy. The boys ate with a will, while their seniors watched them with envy. Later refreshments were passed around to the visitors. A number of speeches were delivered and also several musical selections.

Mayor Newton presided. In opening the mayor said that while there might be a feeling against encouraging anything in the way of militarism when that meant extension of power, but when it meant training for defence it was to be encouraged. This move was a good one. He congratulated them on the gathering. He congratulated Mr. Leek upon what he had done in connection with the Cadet Movement. A splendid state of efficiency had been shown. These boys in their training might be called upon some time to go to the front.

Rev. Mr. Dimmick said that he was going to address himself to the subject of honor. To be a man of honor one need but be a man of courage in all its aspects. Mr. Dimmick quoted from a document signed by Lord Kitchener and most of the great army leaders condemning the use of alcohol. This was backed up by eminent medical men also. The organization to which they belonged, he said, addressing the Cadets, tended to build up strong bodies together with honor and high character. They were the coming men of the country. They would have to enter into these undertakings with clear minds and strong characters. The day was coming when the country expected them to do their duty, no matter what that was.

O. H. Nelson spoke briefly, stating that he was led to believe from the way in which the boys made away with the supper that boys had not changed materially from what they were a few years ago. He congratulated the Cadet Corps on their showing. The training in a military way would teach lessons for all time. It would teach them orderliness and obedience, together with other lessons that would improve them for business pursuits.

Rev. Canon Rix hoped that these Cadets would some time be members of the active militia. That would make them better men physically. A man to be a soldier (Continued on Page 4)

The decision of Premier Fleming, of New Brunswick, to remain in office after having been found guilty of graft will not find much sympathy from either party in Canada. In discussing the matter the Vancouver News-Advertiser has the following to say:

"But the immediate fact is that a commission created by the Legislature, at the instance of Mr. Flemmings Cabinet colleagues, has found at least one charge of extorting money sustained, and has also strongly censured him in respect to other matters. It is understood that the commissioners were chosen by Lieutenant Governor Wood at the request of the acting premier. Whatever may be the personal sympathies and regret of the other ministers they cannot disregard this finding, even if Mr. Flemming did not see the necessity of resigning. But he must see that necessity. If no other member of the cabinet was in any way connected with the proceedings, Mr. Flemming can hardly expect them all to make themselves parties to it as they would by retaining office with him. Nor is it likely that the Lieutenant Governor would allow the report of the commission to be ignored in this way."

The loss of another British warship is announced and the news bears with it a biting sting. There is no one who will complain of the loss of ships when they have had an equal chance against the foe. The tide of battle is ever uncertain and losses and disasters are always a part of the game. What is galling in the extreme, however, is the loss of dashing big ships without even getting the smell of powder. The impression gained from the dispatch is that she was destroyed by the explosion of one of her own shells, probably carelessly handled. This, indeed, is more consoling if it should afterwards be shown to be the result of a shot from a German submarine.

Yesterdays dispatches from the Russian front are very reassuring. If the reports are true there has been a telling defeat inflicted on the German army in Poland. Previous dispatches had declared that this was to be one of the decisive battles of the war and if the Russians have succeeded in putting a quarter of the hostile army out of business it means much for the immediate success of her armies. It will mean that the spirit of her forces will be raised to a high key and that the fall of Grawcow and investment of Posen will be early actualities. Apart from the advantage of their big guns in taking forts the Germans do not seem to be able to have things their own way as they expected.

Notwithstanding the fact that the city engineering department was cut in two some months ago, why not cut it again in two? There is one engineer now in the employ of the city at $300 per month with an assistant at a little less and there is not work enough for one good man. Is this city a charity institution, or why is it that a big force of engineers must be kept on when there is nothing to do. The people will expect the department cleaned out and organized on a business basis.

CANADIAN SQUADRON STRANDED IN LONDON

The Career of Elliott's Horse Comes to an Unfortunate Close.

London, Nov. 25.—The career of the Canadian squadron bearing the name of Elliott's Horse has come to an untimely end. Eighty men are stranded here, and would be without food and bed but for the timely intervention of Colonel Ward, of the Pay and Canadian Record Office and officials of the Jack Club. Colonel Ward has undertaken to foot their dinner and breakfast bills and they will remain guests of the club for the night.

There are eighty men in the squadron, all hailing from the West and, with one or two exceptions, have all seen active service as cavalrymen. Although they are rather chary about giving any information on the subject it appears that Elliott's Horse was raised three months ago by a well known Winnipeg lawyer, who intended the men to join the Canadian contingent as a recognized unit of that name. It is asserted that they negotiated with the Canadian Military Department but were told that mounted men were not wanted in the first contingent, and it should be stated that so far as the military authorities at Ottawa are concerned their responsibility ends there.

The rest of the story savors of fiction. The four officers, who had already been appointed to take charge of the men, when they heard that the squadron would not be officially recognized, took matters much into their own hands and gave the men to understand that, on arrival at Montreal, official recognition would be forthcoming. When they reached there, however, they were informed that some hitch had occurred, but that everything would be in order by the time they reached England. Before sailing from Montreal their own appointed superior officers got them to sign a certain document, which purported to be of an official character, which now proves to have brought more advantage in several ways to its authors than to the men. The four officers, he it noted, traveled across second class and the rest of the squadron third class. It was understood, too, that the men would receive pay during their stay in England, or until such time as they joined the contingent, but up to the present not one of them has received a cent.

The men have now fresh officers, and, needless to say, the former ones are no longer in Elliott's Horse. Major General Alderson has taken a sympathetic interest in the case and seeing that most of the men have families in the West and cannot afford to join Kitchener's army on the basis of Imperial pay, he has advised them to return to Canada and join the second contingent.

The squadron will present itself in a body at the High Commissioner's office as eighty stranded Canadian civilians with a view to having their passages paid. Officials of the C. P. R. are interesting themselves in the matter.

FIRING INTENDED AS FRIENDLY WARNING

U. S. Determined Not to Become Involved in Trouble With Turkey.

Washington, Nov. 28.—Definite details of the adventure of the cruiser Tennessee in the Gulf of Smyrna have been eagerly awaited by administration officials, who have remained confident that the affair probably would be adjusted through channels of diplomacy.

Ambassador Morgenthau has been directed to inquire of the Turkish government why land forces had fired on the Tennessee's launch as it steamed from Vourlah to Smyrna, to investigate conditions at the American consulate and the commanders of the Tennessee and her sister ship North Carolina in nearby waters had instructions to make no move that might embarrass the Washington government.

President Wilson was determined that the United States should not become involved in trouble with Turkey, and confidence was expressed that if the Turkish officers had acted without the authority of their government or the firing was unjustified by naval procedure, that the Porte would apologize.

Secretary of the Navy Daniels summed up his view of the incident by declaring he believed detailed reports would show that the firing was intended as a friendly warning to prevent the launch from entering mined waters.

"I believe that when Captain Decker's report is received it will prove that the firing was a friendly, and not an unfriendly act," said the secretary. "Reports that the waters of Smyrna harbor are mined indicate that the shots were fired to warn the vessel against the danger of mines which it might have come into contact with had it entered the harbor."

Another explanation advanced by Mr. Daniels was that the port had been officially closed, and that the approach of the vessel caused the guns of the forts to sound a warning to prevent it from trespassing.

ALIEN ALLOWED TO SUE.

Austrian in Winnipeg Gets Privilege in the Courts.

Winnipeg, Nov. 27.—Justice Galt has ruled in an action of Pescoviti, an Austrian, against the Western Canada Flour Mills Co., Ltd., that an unnaturalized foreigner has the right of action in Manitoba courts, provided he attends to his own affairs. Pescoviti claimed damages from the company, which moved for a stay of all proceedings on the grounds that the plaintiff was an alien and an enemy. The judge ruled that the case must proceed.

MASTERLY REVIEW OF WAR AND CONDITIONS OF SETTLEMENT

DEMANDS OF ALLIES SO GREAT THAT ENEMY WILL NOT STOP WHILE ANY CHANCE OF SUCCESS REMAINS—FLEET WILL COME OUT FIRST.

Any consideration of the question of the length of the war involves a reference to the terms which the Allies, if successful, would exact. The more humiliating the terms are, the longer will the Germans resist. But there are some conditions which all the Allies are likely to agree upon as the irreducible minimum. These include:

- 1—The destruction of the power of German militarism.
- 2—War indemnities that may reach twenty billion dollars.
- 3—The dismantling of the German fleet.
- 4—The cession of Alsace-Lorraine and all the German colonies.

In addition to these minimum terms, there are a number of secondary conditions which one or all of the Allies may try to enforce. Britain may insist on taking back Heligoland, which was given up before its importance as a submarine base was realized. Russia may demand all of German Poland in order to form a new Polish principality, as well as Galicia and that part of Germany's Baltic provinces east of the Vistula—which, by the way, once formed part of Poland. It may be considered advisable to restore the provinces of Schleswig and Holstein to Denmark, as the Kiel canal runs through them. Then Serbia's claim to the Austrian provinces of Bosnia and Herzegovina may be considered valid, and Greece and Italy may divide Albania. Britain and France also may stipulate that a real constitution be granted to Germany along with full manhood franchise, which would be the best guarantee of peace and progressive government in Germany that could be secured. This would enable Britain to appear as the noble champion of liberty, and the best friend of the German people, and as having secured for them rights that they could not have wrested from the autocracy without a bloody revolution. Britain might go even further, and having stripped Germany of her offensive power, she might, by a grim irony of fate, guarantee the independence and neutrality of Germany as she did many years ago those of little Belgium.

But assuming that the minimum terms alone were imposed; how long do you think the German people would resist them? A German patriot would say until they had run out of blood and ammunition. But they will do nothing of the kind, being an eminently reasonable, not to say shrewd, people. A fanatical tribe or a semi-barbarous people might resist to the last, but an industrial nation with a highly organized society has more common sense than recklessness, and would give up the struggle just as soon as all hope of success was gone and no better terms possibly could be expected by prolonging the struggle. That time has not arrived, although the military situation already offers Germany only a remote chance of prosecuting the war to a successful issue.

Germany will not make peace until her battle fleet has fought with the British in the North Sea. By gaining one great naval engagement the entire situation would be transformed in Germany's favor. It is not putting it too strongly to say that the chances are ten to one against such a development, but no German hereafter could raise his head if the war came to a close while his nation had in being the second most powerful fleet in the world. Depend on it, Germany's battle squadrons will yet seek an engagement, and will prove their ability to inflict very material damage on the enemy. That battle is not likely to come off until the most reckless attacks have been made on Britain's capital ships by submarines and airships. And it is likely to occur before the German army is compelled to relinquish its hold on the Belgian coast.

Nor will Germany yield until the tide of invasion is pouring strongly across one of her frontiers and the line of fortresses buttressing it has been passed by the foe. How near are we to such a development? Certainly not very near on the east. The German army at Soissons is still only 55 miles from Paris, and at Lille the German troops are 130 miles west of their own borders. The French are digging their toes into German Lorraine, but the mighty fortresses of Metz and Strassburg are in front of them, and a passage that way does not promise to be easy. To force a way through the mountainous defiles of Luxemburg might be even more difficult. Further north, the line along the Meuse river, on which the Germans might retire, would be more easily defended than the present position along the Aisne river. Except for the aid of increasing pressure being exerted by the Russians, it is doubtful that the allies could force the German armies across their Empire's western frontier before the middle of next summer.

On the eastern side the situation is more encouraging. The defence fortifications are not nearly so strong and the German forces are in a much worse strategic position. The Russians have had them on the run for four weeks and are everywhere pressing their advantage. The Germans have been turned out of their Warthe River entrenchments and are being driven beyond their frontier on to Breslau, Posen and Thorn. It is quite possible that during the next three months that the Russians will have overrun the entire province of Silesia. This would have a marked, crippling effect on the German armies everywhere, as well as be fraught with political consequences of the first importance. This rashness on the part of Grand Duke Nicholas or inefficiency on the part of his scouting department might bring a reverse on this victorious army.

But even while holding favorable strategic positions, the Germans may be driven by other considerations to make peace. For instance, the appalling casualties her armies are suffering may warn her that she will not be able to long retain such advantages as she possesses. During the first three weeks of the Franco-Prussian war, Prussia lost between eight and nine per cent, by reason of forced marches and during the course of the successful campaign many regiments were reduced by half. Bernhardt rightly pointed out that in the next struggle, the present one, the losses from all causes would be much heavier. Experts figured that an army in a modern war would lose between sixty and seventy per cent. of its men in the first year, but experience in this struggle has taught that the estimate is not nearly large enough and the Canadian contingent is to have reinforcements available at the rate of 25 per cent. every month, which would seem excessive. However, the German official casualty list warrants the belief that the Kaiser has lost more than a million effectives since the war began. Hilaire Belloc puts the figures at 1,700,000. Germany has nearly eight million men under arms, and claims she could secure as many more, but the present wastage of men if maintained at the same rate for another twelve months would produce a condition of utter exhaustion.

Germany no doubt hopes that France will become exhausted first. The republic is feeling the strain, having lost at least twice as many men as Britain has sent to the front. But she has a million and a half still in training. Britain has another million and a quarter, while Russia can provide unlimited millions. The war having become one between the resources of the combatants, Germany is a sure loser.

Another factor making for peace is the industrial stagnation in Germany and the increasing difficulty the German allies are experiencing in getting anaesthetics and war munitions. The blockade of the North Sea is keeping out of work hundreds of thousands of men who otherwise would be employed. The hardships resulting may be borne patiently for the first four months, but the second four months conditions will be nearly unendurable. In Austria the exports have declined seventy-five per cent. Germany will feel the pinch just as badly later on. And it is probable that she will be deserted by her principal ally and be faced with other hostile combinations. So far as food supplies and campaign funds are concerned, Germany will show herself surprisingly well prepared.

Taking everything into consideration, however, it seems a moral certainty that before this time next year Germany will be approaching a state of helplessness, and will be convinced that further resistance will only result in the further desolation of her country without offering any prospect of securing terms better than those then offering. —Toronto Star.

HIS OWN DEAR PRUSSIA.—The Kaiser (after reading dispatch): "The Barbarians in my own dear Prussia. Why can't they invade Austria, or even Bavaria? Have I not provided Turkey for them to invade?" (Cartoon by James Frise.)

VANDALISM JUSTIFIED BY GERMAN GENERAL

Hopes That in This War Germans Have Merited the Title Barbarians.

London, Nov. 28.—The correspondent of The Standard in Copenhagen wires as follows, quoting General von Disfurth (retired), in an article contributed to the Hamburg Nachrichten:

"No object whatever can be served by taking any notice of the accusations of barbarity levelled against Germany by their foreign critics. We owe no explanations to any one. Whatever act committed by our troops for the purpose of discouraging, defeating, and destroying the enemy is a brave act and fully justified.

"Germany stands the supreme arbiter of her own methods. It is no consequence whatever if all the monuments ever created, all the pictures ever painted, all the buildings ever erected by the great architects of the world be destroyed, if by their destruction we promoted Germany's victory. War is war. The ugliest stone placed to mark the burial of a German grenadier is a more glorious monument than all the cathedrals ever put together. They call us barbarians. What of it? We scorn them and their abuse.

"For my part, I hope that in this war we have merited the title, barbarians. Let neutral peoples and our enemies cease their empty chatter, which may well be compared to the twitter of birds. Let them cease to talk of the cathedral of Rheims, and all of the churches and all the castles in France which have shared its fate. Our troops must achieve victory. What else matters?"

WORK FOR TANNERS.

England Expected to Place Huge Orders for Leather Goods With Canadian Tanners.

Ottawa, Nov. 25.—The British War Office is likely to place huge orders in Canada for leather goods equipment. A delegation of sixty of the leading tanners of Canada was called in consultation by Sir George Foster, Minister of Trade and Commerce, to-day and asked if in the event of such orders being received they would be able to supply the leather. Sir George was assured that the capacity of the Canadian factories was fully equal to any demand that may be made on

KILLED BY DEER HE SHOT.

Wisconsin Hunter Is Victim of Wounded Animal.

Antigo, Wis., Nov. 28.—That a fight with a wounded deer ended in the death of David Gibson was revealed when the body of the hunter was found yesterday in Sawyer Lake, near here. Gibson was out hunting Monday and wounded a large deer, which plunged into the lake. Gibson followed the wounded animal, and was killed in the struggle.

Experiments are under way with glass for spectacles intended to filter out the injurious rays of artificial light, leaving the effect of sunlight.

In the Letter Box

Editor, The Daily News.

Sir,—I would like to refer briefly to an article which appeared in the editorial columns of The Journal under the caption, "Rather Confused."

Speaking of the proposal of the Borden government for an emergency grant of $35,000,000 which was turned down by the Senate, The Journal says "there is scarcely a Canadian left now that does not hang his head in shame that the advice was not taken."

This statement is thoroughly false. The contribution proposed would not yet have been of the slightest service in naval operations to date as the dreadnoughts proposed to be built could not yet have been in commission.

What is true, is that there is scarcely a Canadian who has not been deeply mortified that Canada found herself in the defenceless position in which she was at the declaration of war, a mortification intensified when we see what noble work the Australian fleet has been able to accomplish.

The Journal goes so far as to say in the last paragraph of the article under consideration that the Kaiser would in all probability have been slower in his determination to wage war had it not been for the action of the Liberals, and that no greater blunder can be conceived than that perpetrated by the Liberals.

We have become accustomed to seeing every possible situation twisted and turned in The Journal to gain some fancied party advantage, but in this case it has gone so far as to call for remonstrance.

The facts are that had the Laurier policy been carried out we should have had fleet units both on the Atlantic and Pacific coasts, and instead of being dependent upon somebody else for the protection of our coasts we could not only have protected ourselves but could have been of the greatest service in keeping open the trade routes of both oceans and possibly might have had the honor of bringing down the Emden before she accomplished all the destruction which she did.

Under any circumstances, the article in The Journal is in very bad taste at this time, but it is worse than that. It is "Germanic" in its evident conceptions that the end justifies the means and that barefaced falsehood is permissible if some party advantage is to be gained.

Yours truly,
T. D. PATTULLO.

Flag waving is all right if you apply the sentiment practically. Some enlist and go to the front. The rest of us can buy "Made in Canada" goods and make the money to keep them there.

had to be a good man physically. There was nothing that would tell a man as quickly as to whether he was behaving himself as to try shooting at the target. He never knew it to fail that a boy who did not make the target well was a cigarette smoker. He advised the boys against that habit. No man should wear a uniform who did not feel loyalty to the country to which he belonged. The uniform that the boys were wearing was one which meant loyalty to the King and country. He paid a compliment to the boys for standing as they should, at attention, while "God Save the King" was played. Wherever there was a military organization of any kind they found the Union Jack, which stood for all that we were proud of in the past. When they saluted the flag they were saluting the pride of their nation. The Union Jack was the flag of the Cadets just as much as it was the flag of the British soldier and the flag of the soldier of every part of the nation.

Principal Hunter, of the Public School, remarked upon the effect of war on teaching. He never found the teaching of geography so easy as it was now. He could, if it were not for the evil effects, wish that war might always continue. He remarked upon the effects that would follow the war.

Rev. Mr. Wright gave the boys good advice along the line of having good minds in good bodies. He liked to see boys passing along in a soldierly manner with the glow of manhood in their face. All that was good in our nationality was represented in the King. It was not that the King had any higher powers.

G. R. Naden spoke very briefly, complimenting the boys on their appearance.

Interspersed with the speeches, Masters Lancaster and Cummings gave a number of bugle calls. The bugle band of the Cadets also gave a demonstration of its ability along that line. Miss Nauman played piano solos. Mr. Harvey contributed a violin solo and also a vocal solo. Mr. Davis as an East Indian sang a suitable song.

Following the general program the floor was cleared and dancing was indulged in for a time to the delight of the young people.
